There are missions that slip your path into the adjective 'adjective'. In fact, there is a good story behind the game. It turns out that your stay on a strange island reminded of the Dark Ages is not a coincidence. There was a kataklism that killed most of the men. The only survivors are the ones who managed to sail away from this very, hardly adequate living condition. As a result, there appeared 4 exiled countries within a constant state of war between each other. You are not interested in all this bullshit. Your only goal is to survive and get as many gold as you can. Suddenly, you find that you've got a legacy, so you decide to run behind it. While running behind it, you'll be in missions and choose between different options in how to continue your journey.
