The DuPage County Jail is located in Dupage County, Illinois. Each corrections department of correctional facilities has its own rules on visitation, commissar and mail. This installation also has guidelines to follow. Before connecting with a loved one here, you can find them using a free locator for the DuPage County Jail. Pigeonly provides search services and other inmates. To search for an inmate at the DuPage County Jail you can use the Pigeonly Prison Locator Service. Those searched for state prison may vary depending on the locality. That's why it's important to use inmate services to make things easier. Incarceration is difficult for families and inmates. Inmates are often at various locations on the entire prisoner list for the Illinois department of corrections. Families can also search their inmate by going to the DuPage County Jail website. You will need your internal ID, which you are provided with when you are assigned a particular installation. All information related to an inmate is updated in the list containing his release and incarceration date. Note that the database contains only currently imprisoned inmates. Sign up for Pigeonly for additional help. How to find someone in DuPage County Jail: STEP 1: Go to to start a search for your first click on the Search Now inmate and enter the name of your inmate's installation. STEP 2: Be sure to check if your inmate's installation is county, state, or federal. STEP 3: Choose your inmate and your related services to keep in touch with your loved one. STEP 4: Finally, you will need to register an account with Pigeonly, and we will provide you with your loved one's contact information. (Don't worry, registration is completely free!) Families can search for their inmate at any of the facilities they have been assigned to, the current location of an inmate, in which the dupage county jail facilities will be housed or where they will be placed next. The DuPage County Jail updates the information daily to make sure it is complete and accurate. Families can an inmate by name and surname or by the inmate's booking number. It not only contains personal information about inmates, but also the reason why an inmate is serving his period at the facility. With the internal locator the staff of the facilities can check the reason why an inmate is imprisoned. Before you start discussing the different tools to help locate your loved one, let's quickly make it clear that you will need to have some vital identification information in hand in order to do so. This information includes: The full legal name of your loved one (first, middle and last)Your date of birthThe state in which you are being held inNote that some tools may suggest or require additional information about your loved one, depending on individual circumstances As we go through this list, we will make clear what that information is and where applicable. Now for the internal localization tools. As we said, the BOP's search tool only shows results for federal inmates. To find an inmate who is being held in a local jail or a state prison he will need the government website. State prisons may vary in their process. A general process for finding your loved one can be seen with some examples: Here's what you'll need if your loved one is imprisoned in New York: Note that the department's identification number or New York State identification number are meant to be used on their own. In other words, if you include any of these numbers, you do not need to include the name of the intern and the year of birth. Similarly, to find an inmate in California, you'll need to enter your full legal name or prison number if you know it: While most states provide the ability to search for an inmate on your official government website, others use a third-party search tool, which we'll discuss in the next section. The Bureau of Prisons allows you to search your database of federal prisoners in order to locate your loved one and discover your contact information. Note that this database includes only inmates held in federal prisons - we will arrive in smaller prisons and prisons at any one time. The BOP database also includes information about inmates who have been released, dating back to 1982. When you use the BOP search tool, you can search for a prisoner by name or by various identification numbers. First, let's look for a recluse with your name: Again, searching for a common name without any additional information leads to a large number of search results. Also, note that the search engine limits the number of results to 100 that is, a lot of other inmates by the name of John Smith didn't even show up. Obviously, it's not likely that you'll face this issue, but it's definitely good to know. In any case, you can also narrow down your search including the race, age, and gender of your loved one. Because this search tool doesn't offer advanced search You may need to include this information to see less than 100 results. You can also search for a federal recluse using a number of different ID numbers, such as: BOP registration number DCCD FBI Number INS Because these identification numbers of course belong solely to your loved one, using this method is the best way to generate accurate results from the BOP site. Home > Civil Process Here are some general guidelines for sending money to an inmate's trusted account; but not specific to a particular facility, institution or prison. Inmates need money to access various privileges such as weekly purchases at the commissioner, making phone calls, using the email service where it is offered, using the electronic tablets where they are offered and paying for their co-payment in need of medical or dental services. Some county jails require a fee per night for prison expenses. What is a commissioner? A commissar is a store inside the prison. The day of the police station is usually held once a week and can only be used if the inmate has funds in his commissar's account, such as a bank account within the bank. If the intern has a job, their salary will also be hiind in that account. The Commissioner sells several products that inmates can purchase if they have money on their books. Items sold are clothing, shoes, snacks and food, as well as hygienic products such as soap, shampoo and shaves. The curator also sells products such as books, magazines, televisions, radios, play cards, headphones, mp3 players, electronic tablets, songs and educational programming. They also sell paper, envelopes and stamps that allow the inmate to write their loved ones, friends and family. The facilities will provide stamps and paper to inmates who are indigent, eligible where there is no money in their commissar account for at least 30 days. How do you send money to an inmate? Sending money to an inmate varies from state to state, depending on whether it's county, state or federal, their ways to accept money for inmates' changes by the money transfer company they've hired. Federal prisons and some statewide prisons have centralized banking systems which means that you don't need to know where they are specifically, just that they're in state systems from, say, the California, Texas, Florida DOC or the FBOP to name a few. How do I send money with MoneyGram? Some facilities allow you to deposit cash through the separate kiosk in the lobby window or visiting room. Most facilities will also accept an order for postal money by post at the entity's postal address to be paid in the full intern's name. Electronic banking allows friends and family to send funds online, and correction departments are starting to favor this method because it's less work for staff and more accurate/easier to keep track of, like how how to be more convenient. Regardless of the method of sending funds, there are several key things you will need to know: • Full compromised name of the internal • Internal identification number • Internal location - or a system like the federal BOP Before sending any funds that you should find out which online transfer companies of the institution that your inmate is imprisoned in uses. You can find this information on our site by navigating to the facilities page. click the Money Transfer button below the address and phone number. Pay close attention to the rules of the installation. Sometimes they will require the money senders to be on the inmate's visit list. Some correctional facilities have a deposit limit, such as $200-300 at a time, but in federal, there is no limit. MoneyGram, JPay, OffenderConnect, AccessCorrections, JailATM, WUJ, Touchpayonline, tigercommissary, smartdeposit are some of the money transfer companies that use various facilities. MoneyGram is by far the oldest and most trusted. Who else can access the money you send? An inmate with fines or restitution will be subject to the garrison of the commissar/trust account. If the inmate has these financial obligations, it is extracted from the bank account of the intern. This can be a percentage or the total amount depending on the situation. We recommend that inmates who go to their offer contact the counselor and make an agreement in advance. If you come in knowing that they are taking 20-25% of all deposits it is better than doing everything and you find out in the commissar line when the account is zero. Why does my inmate ask for more than I normally send? This is usually a sign that the inmate is doing something they don't have and need money to get them out of or through a situation. It could be the game, it might be extortion that it might be other things you don't need to know in this forum (for now). Set limits with your inmate. Tell them that's the amount I can send each month and that's it. There are no extras beyond the limit. In addition, never send money to another inmate's account at the instruction of his inmate. This is a sign that something is not right. If people's corrections discover this, and they do it more times than not, it will result in severe disciplinary action for the inmate, and certainly the loss of all privileges. Who can I call if I suspect anything? We recommend talking to the facility's case manager or counselor and using a generic reference in case your suspicions are wrong. You don't have to put them in a more difficult position if they are. Are.
