Photo: PxhereHack Your CityEach Friday, we ask for your best tips from the city: driving tips, restaurant recs, things to do, and any other advice for visitors and locals. Sometimes the weekly topic is a specific city; other times, it's an aspect of every city, so everyone can participate. Welcome to meet me city. There are the Cardinals, the Missouri Democrats, half a McDonald's sign along the river. There are all the journalists in the big city who left the old Wind Gap. He must have had a cart by now. This week Hack Your City wants to know what's good, secret, and hackable at St. Louis.Each Monday on Hack Your City, we ask readers for your best tips on a city: driving tips, restaurant recs, things to do, and any other advice for visitors and locals. Then, on Thursday, we present the best comments. We go around the United States and the world. What is underestimated? Which places deserve more visitors? What are the best alternatives to tourist traps or overrated city favourites? What is the weirdest thing you like in the area, what would panic anything but the most adventurous or demanding? How should a visitor approach the city? How can they get along with the locals? What are local traditions, behaviours and laws? What's the mood? What is it in the long term? What do you love and hate about the city? How do you hack your ride or your lunch break? What took you years to learn? Where do you go when you want to get out of town for a day or a week? Finally, how has the atmosphere of the city changed in recent years? What old travel tips no longer apply here, and what new tips does it? Leave your tips in the comments below, and let's highlight the best. (First read other comments to make sure yours is unique.) Then come back Thursday for a new post full of highlights. Page 2Photo: BuphoffHack Your CityEach Friday, we ask you for your best tips in town: driving tips, restaurant recs, things to do, and any other advice for visitors and locals. Sometimes the weekly topic is a specific city; other times, it's an aspect of every city, so everyone can participate. I'd like to have an enemy in St. Louis, MO, so I can call them my nemesis. Hahaha the city has a bow. OK, that's pretty fun. It's time for the best St. Louis tips from Lifehacker readers. And we have a load of trolleys. I've been that everyone is going to throw themselves at St. Louis, Inimoy said. It's cool. If you don't live here, you can't appreciate the innate midwest it brings. Photo: Keith YahlEat and Drink, Imo's pizza is, uh, controversial. Especially because of the cheese, which is not mozzarella, but the cracker-thin crust is also a point of contention for some. It's worth a try, but you may want to have a backup plan in case it's not to your liking. —David E. SmithThe pro advice on Imo is to do it right or Pizza is hella too expensive and overrated, go to Talayna or Racanelli instead. Hey, Shut the Fuck UpAller to Ted Drewes. Take a concrete. Then come back the next day and start again. —BubarubuGioia's Deli (pronounced Joy-uhs) has an amazing 'hot salami', which is actually head cheese, but don't let that scare you away from it. —ChewmanfooPappy's Smokehouse and Bogart's Smokehouse are the 2 best places to eat in the whole city. (Sugarfire was just ok.) Get the ribs and ends burned at one or the other. Bogart has really good pastrami too. —CoryA restaurant I fondly remember is a barbecue called The Shaved Duck. We went there and an award-winning James Beard restaurant. Shaved duck blown up James Beard square out of the water. —IlcocoThe Delmar Loop is a great place to visit with a number of unique shops. The Snow Factory is a Thai style ice cream place that is delicious. —BeastRaviolis grilled, breaded beef ravioli fried and then served with marinara sauce for dip. They are an aperitif and as a child I had no idea of boiled ravioli people. —midwest-phillyThe local st. Louis food scene will withstand or exceed any other city at a fraction of the cost. There are far too many to name, but those that have received national distinctions include Olio, Elaia, Nixta, Vicia, Niche food group (several restaurants owned by award-winning chef Gerard Craft of James Beard) and our small Bosnian food truck/soon a Balkan box of brick and mortar treats. —plags5There are a number of large craft breweries in and around the city such as: Urban Chestnut, Perennial Artisan Ales, Narrow Gauge, 4Hands, Heavy Riff, Wellspent, Main and Mill, Side Project, Schlafly, Earthbound, Alpha. —FoodNBeerThe Crown Candy Kitchen. StL's oldest candy store, I think. they use old machines and candy molds to make their candy. —dr_bombaySouth Grand has restaurants representing more countries than Epcot. Cafe Natasha for Persian and all the gin you could ever want, Guerrilla Street Food for Filipino Food Truck turned brick and mortar, Ethiopian Meskerem, and vine for cheap Lebanese killer eats. There are plenty of vegetarian options too. —juleannieMonks Mound at Cahokia MoundsPhoto: Ron CogswellSee and DoSi you're in the weird or scary, Lemp Manor is a scary stop. —Darkest Timeline Zack Morris Before moving to St. Louis, I remember visiting the city for ball games and family events. This meant one or two Soulard bars before the game and then drive straight to the suburbs. This excludes any chance of discovering the large neighbourhoods of which this city is Made. If I could give advice to each visitor, it would be to make a short list of neighborhoods and hit as many as possible. —AscoltamiThe Grove is a very trendy and trendy area, but it's also the Pride District — lots of LGBTQ bars and dance clubs (gay and straight). Cherokee Street is the uber-hipster/bohemian hangout, but is also a hub for Latino/culture. Lots of restaurants, specialty bars, tattoo shops, and tons of great Mexican cuisine. —potsmaster1984Cathol or not, visit the new cathedral on Lindell Blvd. It has one of the largest mosaics in the Western Hemisphere and it really is a sight to behold. —MikeVisit the Cahokia mounds nearby just across the river. It is an ancient Aboriginal town with impressive handmade mounds. It is also a UNESCO World Heritage Site. —SkarodemocracyDelicious Vinyl is a huge old record store that's worth checking out just for the nostalgia factor. —Batphreak The arch grounds have just been redone and a new museum has opened. —TeamPunkassRacingSauf if your main goal is to visit the Ark, I'd be out of the way. It's a long wait, the elevators up suck, and it's a bit disappointing (at least in my experience). —Joe Average ManI agree. It is better to spend time walking along the river and seeing the Ark than climbing into the Ark. —FoodNBeerCity Museum: you won't find another place like this. Basically, a giant playground made of random scrap: school buses on the roof, eviscerated planes, secret passages, slides everywhere, etc. Bring knee pads and let your kids go crazy. —Consider that the City Museum is not for everyone. I had a legitimate panic attack because it was so much all, total sensory overload. I sat in the hall of the caves and cried for half an hour. —MayAfternoonI feel like Grand Center doesn't have enough love in these kinds of messages. You have the Fox for the shows, Powell Hall for the symphony, everyone local knows about them. But you also have things like Circus Flora, the Museum of Contemporary Art (free), the Sheldon for Art and Music, Jazz St. Louis, and Public Media Commons which has some amazing PBS-cravate in programming and events. —juleannie The architecture of Lafayette Square is one of the best in the country (painted ladies are considered among the most beautiful in America). —KCMO fo sholn Botanical Garden, we only visited the Butterfly House and my beloved 4yo son. We went there in October, so they also had scary insects (scorpions, beetles, cockroaches, spiders) and carnivorous plants on display, as well as the butterfly greenhouse. That was awesome. —steebThe most forward-thinking thing the St. Louis has done to tax homeowners in the city and county for the museum district. This means that the zoo, art museum, science centre and natural history museum are all free to go. Seriously, enter the zoo at any time without paying a penny. Better yet, they are all located in the forest park, one of the largest urban parks in the country. You can spend 4 days in Forest Park and leave. —InimoySt. Louis has some of the best art museums in the country. The Museum of Contemporary Art (CAM) has just completed a beautiful Amy Sherald exhibition, is currently hosting a Basquiat exhibition, and is constantly home to incredible local and global artists. The St. Louis Art Museum (SLAM) has just opened its doors for Kehinde Wiley, and the museum is filled with beautiful masterpieces and a large wing of modern art. The Pulitzer Museum is also one of the most unique spaces I have ever been, and the quality of the exhibits is on par with any museum in the country. All these museums are free! —Frida KhaledCity MuseumPhoto: sawdust_mediaKnow and PlanSt. Louis is a kind of midwestern quintessence. People will make an announcement and smile, people will also cut you in traffic and steal parking spaces without regrets. St. Louis is also a dozen municipalities. The city and county are separate political entities (the city is not part of the county at all) and each municipality has its own quirks. Don't panic driving through a bunch of them. Bubarubu Good luck heading east. All major highways are under construction downtown. It's an absolute mess f--cking. —notGeorgeLucasFor all the bad press, we get this city is pretty sleepy, especially if you're just visiting. All the crimes in the city occur in a relatively small area and if you stay away from it, you will be fine. —Octantis People like to make their own lanes at intersections. If the road is even wide enough for two cars to scratch, someone will slide into your DM to your right and use this non-existent lane as a right turn lane. —David E. Smith There are either very loose policies on open containers or these policies are applied vaguely. I haven't found the answer, but a lot of people carry drinks around the different downtown stL neighborhoods. —Jeff Kent's MoustachePhoto: Chuck CokerGet Out of TownThe World's Largest Catsup Bottle is a 20-minute drive east. —gewfMastodon State Historic Site. The locals really don't know about it, so get in the rental car for a ride. Spring is the best time to visit. Great museum with fossils and artifacts. The outdoor area is welcoming and a great place for a family picnic. —InimoySt. Louis was the first major stop on the old Route 66, so definitely make a stop at some of the highlights of Route 66. The former Chain of Rocks Bridge (which has been closed for years) is a slightly kitsched pedestrian/cycle bridge until now. This bridge was famous at the time for 45-degree turn in the middle of the river. It's fun to imagine the old giant cars running and squeeze by each other. —TheMeanestSnowflakeThe most of these reviewers have left a lot more advice than we've quoted, so read all their comments under the Personal tab on the original message.
