Chris watts attacked in prison

Chris Watts is currently serving consecutive life sentences for murdering his pregnant wife, Shanann, and his two daughters, Bella, four, and Celeste, three. Shanann is 15 weeks pregnant with their son, Nico. Before the murder, Chris Watts had an affair with Nichol Kessinger, a woman he worked with. When Watts' marriage broke down, it was unclear whether he planned the murder, or whether he was broken when Shanann said she wanted a divorce. Either way, he will serve the rest of his life behind bars. While adapting to life in prison, Chris Watts appears to have be be friends with a young man convicted of assaulting a family. Who is this man and how did Watts form a friendship with him? Let's find out. The murder of Closs Jake Patterson did not know who the Closs family was when he broke into their Wisconsin home in October 2018. It didn't stop him from kidnapping Jayme Closs, 13, and killing both her parents, James & Denise Closs. The kidnapping was brutal - Patterson shot James Closs with a handgun and broke through a bathroom door where Denise & Jayme blockaded himself. He shot Denise and dragged Jayme out of her house. Patterson held Jayme Closs for eighty-eight days before she could escape. I followed his habit and I regained his freedom, Jayme Closs wrote to the court when Patterson was convicted, describing her escape. He pleaded guilty to two counts of first-degree murder and kidnapping. Patterson's verdict In a statement in court, Jayme Closs wrote about her parents and the sense of security that Jake Patterson stole from her. They did everything they could to make me happy and protect me. He took it from me forever. I feel safe in my house, and I love my room and all my belongings. He took it, too. I don't even want to see my home or my stuff because of the memory of that night. There is no doubt in my mind that you are one of the most dangerous men to ever walk on the planet, Judge James Babler told Jake Patterson before his sentencing, calling him the incarnation of evil and saying the public can only be safe if you are detained until you die. Babler sentenced Patterson to two consecutive life sentences without the possibility of parole in 2019. Reading bible passages together In prison, Patterson wrote that he fanned about kidnapping hundreds of girls and shooting their parents. Through a newsletter from KARE 11, Patterson wrote the only thing preventing him from committing a crime was the fear of hell. When he stopped activating into God, he acted out his fan fantasy by killing the Closs family and kidnapping Jayme Closs. In Chris Watts' new book on prison time, The Perfect Father: The True Story Chris Watts, his All-American Family, and a Shocking Murder, John Glatt reveals the friendship formed between Chris Watts & Jake Patterson. Patterson. & Jake Patterson met in Bible studies, when both men became deeply religious after going to prison. Glatt details Chris Watts has become a mentor to Jake Patterson while inside, Watts & Patterson is located in neighboring cells at Dodge Correctional Institution in Wisconsin. Cindy Watts, mother of Chris Watts, told Glatt Patterson that Chris would read bible passages every evening and spend hours discussing them. The Perfect Father Per Cindy Watts, Chris Watts advised Patterson, who was twenty-three when he was convicted, to get control of his anger. When they go out to recline, the other inmates will start yelling at them and Patterson will start yelling everything back. Christopher said to him, 'Don't do it. Just calm down.' Glatt also wrote that each Cindy, Chris Watts kept pictures of Shanann, Bella, and Celeste on their cell walls and talked to them at night. He wrote Celeste a letter on her birthday and told his parents to read it at her grave. He describes himself as Celeste's safe haven despite killing her and throwing her body into an oil tank. Both Chris Watts and Jake Patterson will be in jail for the rest of their lives. Although Patterson was transferred to New Mexico, the two remained in touch. He received a lot of letters at first, said a source who spoke to Watts in prison. Many of them come from women who think he is handsome and feel compassion for him. He had nothing better to do, so he wrote them back. And he began to have penpals. A few of them stand out, and they have kept in touch. Get push notifications with news, features, and more. + Follow And are the women troubled by Watts' horrific crimes? Believe it or not, no, the source said. They had compassion for him, despite what he had done. On August 13, 2018, Watts strangled his wife, Shanann, at their Colorado home. He then drove his body to a job site at the oil company where he worked. He dumped his wife's body and then smothered his daughters - Bella, 4, and Celeste, 3. After pleading guilty to murder, he received a life sentence. Authorities said Watts carried out the killings because he had an affair with a colleague who thought he was separated. In the days before the murder, Shanann Watts contacted a friend and shared her growing concern about her marriage - but she never doubted her life was in danger. Some letters are angry, the Says. A lot of them come from people of faith who want to pray for him. But then he gets letters from women who want to connect with him, you know, romance. He replied because he had nothing better to do. Watts is under protection, and only leaves his cell for an hour a day to exercise and take a shower. He is not eligible for parole. On August 13, 2018, exactly two years ago, Chris Watts killed his pregnant wife and two young daughters. The details of the crime were brutal: He strangled his 34-year-old wife, Shanann, in their Colorado home, and then killed his daughters - Bella, 4, and Celeste, 3 - at his job site on an oil field. (He was moved out of Colorado for security reasons.) A prison source who spoke to Watts over the past month told PEOPLE that he has resigned to the fact that he will spend the rest of his life in prison - and is hopeless that anything will ever change. He knew exactly what he was doing, sources told PEOPLE. He's obsessed with what he's done. He says he can't shake his family's memories, and they haunt him. He is in his own psychological suffering, every day of his life. He knew he deserved it, the source continued. He knew that he had made many mistakes in his life, and this was his punishment. For 23 hours a day, Watts is in custody. He can leave his cell for a shower or exercise, but little else. When he's in his cell, he has very little to do: He's allowed to have a Bible and family photo. He has pictures of his family next to his bed. Want to keep up with the latest crime coverage? Last November, a source told PEOPLE that Watts had found religion in prison, and that he reflected on his sins daily. One day did not go by - a minute did not go by - where he did not think about his family, the source said. He's in a hell of his own making. A family friend, who asked to go by Ms Kim's first name, told PEOPLE last year that Watts was full of regrets. He was upset that everyone was hurt, Kim said. He wishes he could go back in time. He wishes he had handled things differently. Despite the fact that he considered filing an appeal against his Now he realizes that release from prison will not. This is his life, the source said. Every day. Every hour. Minute by minute. Full of remorse and remorse for the choices he made. Published: 20:00 GMT, 16 November 2020 | Update: 20:37 GMT, 16 November 2020 Wife and child killer Chris Watts has been disciplined and separated from his 'brother' in after prison security guards found his underwear, a jar of Vaseline and baby oil in another man's cell - but the inmate's fiancée insisted Watts only 'helped' his friend. Both Watts, 35, and inmate Dylan Tallman, 32, were punished in July after Watts' property was found in Tallman's cell, it was revealed last week. Reports showed the discovery showed the two had sex while in prison. The discovery forced authorities to separate two inmates who had become close as they served their sentences in adjacent rooms. But Christa Richello, Tallman's fiancée, told DailyMail.com in an exclusive interview that Watts and Tallman were merely good friends who found each other in jail and they were not lovers. 'I can definitely prove that my fiancé is not gay, and not Chris Watts,' Richello, 42, said. And I don't believe the force of circumstances because they were locked up led them to have any sex. Those accusations were crazy, and I just had to laugh at it, she added. Richello explained that Watts and her fiancé are now seeking hard life in prison after their separation. Richello, who lives in East Haven, Connecticut, is planning to marry career criminal Tallman shortly after he was released from Dodge Correctional Institution in Waupun, Wisconsin. Cold-blooded killer Chris Watts was disciplined and separated from his 'brother in spirit' after prison guards found his underwear, a jar of Vaseline and baby oil in another man's cell - but the inmate's fiancée insists Watts only 'helped' his friend Watts who is serving five life sentences plus 84 years for The murders of 2018 pregnant wives Shanann and their daughters , Bella and Celeste in Colorado Watts, 35, and Dylan Tallman, 32, (pictured) were both punished in July after Watts' property was found in Tallman's cell, it was revealed last week. They're friends. They're very close but that's all, she said. Richello wrote to Watts after he was sentenced to five life sentences plus 84 years for the murders of his 15-week-pregnant wife Shanann and their two daughters, Bella, 4, and Celeste, 3, in Colorado. But the killer receiving numerous letters from female fans, he delivered her letter to his friend Tallman - believed to be in exchange for a waffle and a packet of ramen noodles. Richello denies having any such trade. Richello is a the psychologist specializes in cases of sexual abuse and trauma and says she worked inside the Connecticut prison system. But she had to quit due to her lupus - the same disease that Shanann suffered from. She believes Watts has pleaded guilty and he is not involved in the murder of his wife, daughter and un born son. I watched the video of Chris Watts with his children and his wife. It's hard for me to believe he's capable of committing that crime.' I wrote to him about getting the truth out. I told him to keep fighting and let him know there were people supporting him,' said Richello, a frequent guest on Armchair Detective, a British YouTube show that pushes the unfounded theory that Watts did not act alone. Tallman, who has been in and out of prison throughout his adult life, wrote to her within a week and they began a letter that led to his proposal over the summer. Richello now sometimes refers to herself as Christa Tallman even though she has not legally changed her name.
