In rail Europe, we believe in price transparency. We use the actual data from rail Europe searches to assess the cheapest prices you should find for your journey. The cheapest price is the lowest price we've found for this trip. These prices are usually found when booking opens, but they vary due to availability, which depends on factors such as the day of the week or the time of year. Popular trips include a 30-day deposit and a 7-day prepayment. They are updated every two weeks using the prices we have found, searching exactly 7 or 30 days from the last Thursday (we chose Thursday, because that is when average prices are usually found). Prices for 30 days and 7 days fluctuate according to demand and availability during the search. For example, a 7-day price in summer is likely to be more expensive than the same journey in winter. Prices are sourced in GBP and converted into other currencies using the market's daily market rate. We always strive to improve the functioning of price controls and welcome feedback on how to improve it. More tips on how to find the cheapest tickets can be found in our infographic. The carpet is over 1,000 years old and recognized by UNESCO. It is 230 feet long and 20 inches long and is thought to have been embroidered around 1070. Scene 1: King Edward the Confessor Even if you're the most passionate Second World War history buffs and are anxious to get to the landing beaches of Normandy, you'll want to save an hour or so by visiting Bayeux Tapestry. What is Bayeux Tapestry, you ask? Bayeux Tapestry shows 50 scenes showing the events up to the Norman conquest. It tells the story of King Edward of England sending Harold, Earl of Wessex, to Normandy to inform William (The Conqueror) that the king has chosen him to succeed him after his death. But when King Edward dies, Harold takes over the throne, forcing William to fight for his right to be king. The carpet culminates in the Battle of Hastings in 1066. Scene 7: English go ashore ... Bayeux Tapimetsa Museum audio guides that explain scenes on the carpet. Be sure to take advantage of this, because it is really well done and tells the whole story of conquest. In the Middle Ages, the carpet was rolled out a few times a year to teach people about Norman's conquest history. History is fascinating, not to mention learning in the same way people did so long ago. You leave the museum behind wishing there were more tapestries to see! Visit Notre-Dame de Bayeux for Cathédrale. The cathedral opened in 1077 and was the first home of Bayeux Tapestry. The cathedral is towering over all the other buildings. It's one thing to see in a great, gorgeous Cathedral in a big city like Paris, but when you see one small town like Bayeux, it shows how powerful the church was hundreds of years ago. Bayeux Cathedral is a great example of this. You can see why people living in medieval times would have felt feared and protected by god and priests serving in his name. Walk to bayeux's open-air market. Every Saturday along the main road through Bayeux vendors sell fresh fish, produce, bottles of Calvados (apple brand produced in the area), household items, clothes and souvenirs. Walking through markets like these, the food always feels so fresh! Scallops are a local Normandy specialty. When they are in season, if you visit, make sure to try some. I haven't tasted any better! Whether walking through the market on Rue Saint-Jean or rue Saint-Patrice, be sure to take a break and veer off to walk along the Bayeux canal and see the water wheel and waterfall it creates. Places to visit Normandy at France's American Cemetery awaits over Omaha Beach. The French gave this land to the United States for aid during World War II. If you're in this country, you're technically american. No doubt you've come to visit the D-Day beaches of Normandy, Pont-du-Hoc, American Cemetery, D-Day Museum, and countless other WWII monuments. While you could rent a car and self-drive to these attractions, you'd definitely miss a ton of incredible information. The best Normandy tours are usually led outside by knowledgeable locals who pick you up and drop you off in your hotel after a full day. You can visit D-Day beaches, famous battlefields, monuments, cemeteries and more. Often these guides and their families have lived in Normandy for generations and can tell anecdotal WWII stories passed on to their relatives that can't find any history book. Their personal perspective on the history of the Second World War may offer nuances that build layers for your understanding of the time period. D-Day tours of Normandy range in length depending on your level of interest. There are half-day excursions and all sorts of Normandy excursions to match your timing and what you want to see. As you tour area, you can not help but hit monuments and memorabilia left in honor of sacrifice made by armed services in many countries. There are many Normandy houses flying not only French flags, but also British, American and Canadian flags too. The people of Normandy understand and appreciate very much how their allies helped them fight for freedom. A visit to Normandy is not only cordial, but also highlights one of the greatest advantages of travel. First-hand experiences bring history to life and create a connection with the past that is much more meaningful than learning about it in the classroom. Another benefit of a visit to Normandy is how close you get to Mont Saint-Michel. This UNESCO World Heritage Site is one of the most visited places in France and around the world. This medieval town with saint-michel monastery is located on a rocky island surrounded by the northwest atlantic ocean. Mont Saint-Michel is where St. Michael told the Bishop of Avranches to build a church in 708. Mont Saint-Michel became the place pilgrims would come soon after. Located in Bayeux, Mont Saint-Michel is just a 1.5-hour drive away. You can rent a car, but with a 2 or 3-day getaway from Paris, I recommend keeping it simple and going to mont Saint-Michel guide. The information in this guide is not only useful, but you also need to worry about navigating the area. Especially in late spring and summer, Mont Saint-Michel can be quite busy and someone who knows the area will make the day that much better. Prefer paris to Normandy day trip or guided Normandy tour? Whether you visit yourself or with a guide, it's important to use footbridge to get to the island and pay attention to all the information about the tides. Currents can be particularly powerful, and even at low tide, mud flats can act like quicksand. Once you get to the island and into town, you'll be transported hundreds of years ago. The medieval city revolves around the Monastery. And along the way, you can imagine a butcher shop, a farmer selling his goods, and a shoemaker repairing shoes. Don't forget to visit Mont's ramparts for sweeping ocean views. Once you have rented a car to explore Normandy on your own, you can take an even tour of the Monastery of Mont Saint-Michel and walk through the climbs and small areas surrounding the stone with a guide. When your visit is over, you might even discover more of The History of Mont Saint Michel by visiting four museums in the area that tell the story of the monks who built the Monastery, and the legends and maritime history of Mont Saint-Michel. No matter whether you decide to travel to Normandy by a guide or yourself, the Mont Saint-Michel trip is a must! Is a day trip from Paris to Normandy in plenty of time? This is not if you want to explore the Second World War and visit Mont Saint-Michel. You can get around the area, especially with knowledgeable guides, in 2 days. For example, you can take an early morning train from Paris, spend the first day doing a Normandy WWII tour, visit Mont Saint-Michel with a guide the other day, and leave the last train back to Paris that night. If possible, I would recommend spending 2 nights. You can use the above example and even use half a day's worth of extra time to visit Bayeux Tapestry and explore the city a little bit. If you want to spend time in Bayeux and some neighboring towns and/or do extended D-Day tours, plan to stay longer than 2 nights. When to visit Normandy's Omaha Beach The most popular times visit Bayeux and Normandy in the late spring and summer months. It's also the busiest, so it's important to book hotels and tours early, as well as go with a smile to manage the crowds. Travel during the off-season comes with definite advantages. Tours are few if any people do them. How nice to pay for a tour only is a private guide! Hotels and train tickets are also readily available, allowing you to plan a last-minute trip to Normandy. Even with a cool but sunny 45-50F degree day, you can conveniently see as much second world war history as your heart desires, as is Mont Saint-Michel almost by yourself! Whether you're visiting France for the first time or you're a Francophile who loves to get off-the-beaten-road in Paris, take the time to visit Bayeux and explore Normandy.
