Princess diaries 2 pdf

Prepare to feel very, very old: Today the Princess Diaries, the A.K.A. first film you loved Anne Hathaway in, turns 15. That means the protagonist, Mia Thermopolis, will be 31. And on her desk in Genoa, she works or something. But since the film may be one of the greatest makeover films of our generation, it seems that we are only celebrating its anniversary with some of the most important beauty lessons we took from Her Majesty Amelia Minnesota Thermopolis Realiverdi, Princess of Genovia. (What, like you don't know her full name?) 1. Sometimes you just have to make it work. There are mornings when everything comes together. Hair, makeup – everything works together. But there are a few mornings when you just need to go - period. Even what you have is, well, it doesn't really work. (And that's OK, guys.) 2. Bad hair days happen. Yes, even the princesses have curled up.3 Buy it a drink. Listen to Donna Meagle. (Fans of parks and entertainment?) 4. Rowing brushes and thick mane do not play well together. Curly girls know what I mean. (Seriously, however, just reach for the comb.) 5. Stand up. Posture is important, whether royalty or not. Research from Ohio State University found that people who had better posture were more confident in their own feelings.6 Half-up is always a good idea for styling. It is very chic and suitable for summer, so as not to sing in the face.7 Never underestimate the power of the Glam squad. Ever. (See what they say they will do without their own Glam squads.) 8. Bold eyebrows are the only beauty statement you need. You will feel like a new person when your eyebrows are on fleek.9. But a small shaping of the forehead is always a good idea. Thumb rule: Your eyebrows should complement the shape of your face. Each arch should be arranged with the outer edge of its pupil. But exactly how high, how long and how thick you will go depends on the shape of your face. (More on this here.) 10. When in doubt, wear a hat. In summer there is extra sunlight and you probably spend more time outside, so try one of these shady hats. If nothing else, they give you an excuse to skip washing your hair for another day or two11. If everything else fails, add a crown. Keep your head up, queen, you're going to places. The Princess Diaries | Buena Vista Pictures is the Princess Diaries based on real life? We definitely want Mia Thermopolis to be a real person, but she's a hero that Cabbott came up with. The author revealed on her website, I was inspired to write the Princess Diaries when my mother, after the death of my father, began dating one of my teachers; they later went on to marry just as my mother does in the book! I always had something for princesses (my parents joked that when I was younger, I insisted that my real parents, the king and queen, would pick me up soon, and that everyone should start being much nicer to me), so I stuck a princess in the book just for kicks... and voila! The princess's diaries were born. Is the woman's real place? Although we would be curious to visit Mia and Queen Clarice in real life, Genovia is a fictional European country. In the film The Princess Diaries and its sequel, Genovia is a kingdom located between France and Spain. Follow the cheat sheet on Facebook! Disney Pictures/Redfin Aside from Quite Possibly the film's most epic makeover ever, Julie Andrews's general cruelty and the next level idea of putting M&G on your pizza, one of the highlights of Disney's film The Princess Diaries is the ultra-cool upside-down fire, where the character of Anne Hathaway, M.A. and her author mother lived. Who didn't want to live there? And more importantly, who never dreamed of having an attic room like Mia's fire-full foundation? Now fans of the film can own a piece of cinema history. The 4,800-foot San Francisco fireman used in the film is on the market for $2.6 million. According to curbed SF, the fire brigade was built in 1911 and is known as Engine Company 43. In 1976, the fire house was sold at auction and turned into a private residence. Unfortunately, since the filmmakers used only the façade of the fire house for the film, the interiors are quite different, but we think future buyers will still be fascinated by the cool loft space.
