Once you know where the general area is, use a search engine, such as Google, to search for a three-digit prefix area that can reveal the city of a phone number. By the time you know the city and the state, you can suddenly remember why a person from the area would call you and identify the owner of the phone number. Call the phone number back and ask the person who owns it. If an unknown phone number appears on your caller ID, callback is often the quickest and easiest way to identify the owner of a number. Often times when this scenario happens, it's someone who called the wrong number. If it's not a random person, it could be a business or company in which the person on the other end answers the call back with a business name. At this point, you can ask who owns the business and decide whether you want to continue the conversation or hang up.
