Sister Mary ElephantSingle by Cheech and Chongfrom album Big BambuB-sideWink Dinkerson [1]Released December 1973GenreStoner comedyLength3:38LabelOdeSong Cheech MarinTommy ChongProducer(s)Lou AdlerCheech and Chong singles chronology Santa Claus and his old lady Sister Mary Elephant Basketball Jones with Tyrone Shoelace's Sister Mary Elephant is a comedy skit by Cheech and Chong. The recording appeared on the duo's second album, Big Bambu, released in 1972. [2] It was re-released as a single in 1973 and climbed to no. Synopsis The title character is a highly prized nun substitute teacher (played by Cheech Marin) teaching in a parochial school (Our Lady of 115th Street) classroom of exceedingly irreverent, noisy teenage boys (all played by Cheech and Tommy Chong through overduing). She tries to teach the class, but the boys completely ignore her. She then tries to get the attention of students by speaking ever louder, to no avail. When she finally screams, SHUT UP! at the top of her lungs, in startling contrast to her usually calm manner, follows death silence. She follows this with a again prissy Thank you. This will be a running joke throughout the. Sister Mary Elephant announces that she is replacing their regular teacher, Sister Rosetta Stone, who has sent her love and the artwork she makes: finger painting and dust cloth, indicating that she has probably been institutionalized. After introducing herself, the class erupts into laughter when she hears her name, leading to a repetition of SHUT UP! /Thank you routine. Sister Mary Elephant then asks a student to give her her knife. He adheres, but not quite as she had in mind (it sounds flying and sticking in the wall with a twang). She responds with another prissy Thank you. She continues to try to teach the class, where they continue to speak, which requires further repetitions of her screaming. Sister Mary Elephant tells the class that they will read their previously assigned essays on How I Spent the Summer Holidays. She chooses a boy (Chong), who gets up and reads with a monotonous voice how on the first day he woke up, went downtown to look for a job, and then hung out in front of the pharmacy. Another student (Voiced by Cheech) asks if it's the one on the 13th but to no answer. Chong repeatedly describes the same daily routine verbatim for every day of his vacation as well. Sister Mary tries to get the student to stop reading, but he ignores her and continues, eventually adding that on the third day he got a job of preventing people from hanging out in front of the pharmacy. Sister Mary sees the boy SHUT UP! before he can continue on. A student (Chong) had started asking to go to can, do so repeatedly under the students who read but are completely ignored by Sister Mary. Several times the sound of flatulence is heard suggesting that he has diarrhea or that students are making farting noises. Sister Mary Elephant then reads from a book of excessively flourishing poetry. The class reacts with its usual razzing then fall silent except scattered snoring after a few verses. In a variation of the running joke, she screams for the class to WAKE UP! The sketch ends here with Chong declaring I have to go to can, man. The humour comes from the fact that every time Sister Mary shouts SHUT UP! she amplifies so much that she sounds like an elephant trope, Sergeant Stadanko The character of Sister Mary Elephant reappeared in a later Cheech and Chong skit, Sergeant Stadanko, on their Los Cochinos album. The nun introduces the titular drug officer (Chong) as a guest speaker. Her estanding classrooms immediately become silent at the mention of Stadanko's profession. Later a student (Cheech) rats out another student, Billy (Chong), to Stadanko to sell him oregano packaged as marijuana. Students start fighting, and Sister Mary begs Stadanko to intervene. Stadanko tells her he wants to call the police. The two skits are segued together at Cheech & Chong's Greatest Hit. Legacy SHUT UP! part was used as a sound bite on Imus in the morning.
