A PDF is a file format designed to consistently display documents across devices and platforms. It was developed by Adobe 1992 and has since become one of the most widely used formats for storing and exchanging documents. PDF files can store a variety of data, including formatted text, vector graphics, and raster images. It also includes page layout information that defines the location of each item on the page and the size and appearance of the page in the document. This information is all stored in standard format, so the document looks the same no matter which device or program is used to open it. For example, if you save a PDF on your Mac, it will look the same way on Windows, Android, and iOS. PDF formats support metadata such as document titles, authors, titles, and keywords. You can save embedded fonts, so you don't have to install the appropriate fonts correctly to view the document. PDF documents can be encrypted and can only be opened by authorized users. The file size The file moves storage media, such as a computer hard drive. File sizes can be measured by bytes (B), kilobytes (KB), megabytes (MB), gigabytes (GB), and terabytes (TB) or more. Screen saver. Protective silicone case. Instruction manual light and incredibly thin phone, which is of good quality. It's an ultra-low-cost and ultra-light smartphone, but with other similar devices, the Dally Blue Bibo Air body is completely flat in every way. The camera lens does not pop out on either side of the phone. The body is made of plastic reinforced with high-quality aluminum. The display is protected by gorilla glass 3 and completely covers the front and back of the phone. Given the fairly low cost, we are absolutely impressed with the premium quality of the device. Even if you compare it with other smartphones, for example - the iPhone 6, it may surprise you. We tested the model with a white body and golden finish. In addition, the phone is available in black and silver colors. On the side are a 3.5mm headset jack, microphone, MicroUSB 2.0 port and MicroSim slot. A lightweight, contactless sensor, Android capacitive buttons and a 5-megapixel camera are at the front. Behind is a speaker with an LED flash and an 8-megapixel camera. Display displays stick to AMOLED technology. Blue Bibo Air's compact feel is 67.55% screen and body thanks to its 4.8-inch 720 x 1280 (720p) Super AMOLED display. AMOLED can possess all the qualities of this technology. Of course, the screen shines briskly, but noticeably the color is a bit blurry. In addition, the maximum brightness is 24 bits, which is not suitable for direct exposure to sunlight. The biggest drawback felt by the processor and memory blue bimbo air is the weak power. The device comes with an octa nuclear processor and a clock speed of 1.7 GHz, while the ARM Cortex-A7 comes with 1 GB of RAM and a graphics accelerator ARM Mali-450. With most basic tasks, the processor is very easy to cope with, but it is clear that it is not a heavy game. 16 GB of internal memory may not be enough for advanced users, but most memory is sufficient. The test results on the camera good lighting are pretty decent, but it leaves a lot of video records wanting. In terms of image quality, the quality of the 8-megapixel rear camera depends on the story. The best photos can be obtained with enough natural light that you can't do about photos taken in poor lighting conditions. The result of camera speed video recording is better. First of all, there is a lot of strong noise that can not be removed even with good light multimedia on the removed rollers built-in speakers simply weak and thin, do not have any serious positive qualities. In addition to the Google Play Music app, there is also a custom blue music player. Thanks to super AMOLED technology, the display adapts perfectly to the eye, so you can enjoy watching videos. Blue Bivo Air's battery devices have an average battery. In Blue Bivo Air, in fact, despite the fact that the case is very thin, managed to put the battery 2100 mAh. In the test, the battery lasted 5 hours and 59 minutes. Two Good time compared to other smartphones, compared to size. If you have blue bimbo air for the first time, it's hard to imagine that you can buy a super slim super smartphone for a price of up to $200. Pro incredibly slim body (5.1 mm); Premium look and reliability; The cost is up to $200; Convenient for conversation. The quality of the minus camera is a little disappointing. The built-in speakers are weak. 1 table of contents 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 10 11 12 13 14 15 16 17 18 19 20 21 22 23 Hello, I can not install google home application from Google Play Store on my Blue Life Mark Android 5.1 ...
