I would try to get as big as I can, to get the most stuff, without having an impact on the ability to open the rear hatch. Thanks in advance for all the answers. Newbie Forum Do you have a Limited or Touring 3.6? For those who have limited style rack and crossbars the go for after the market is probably a Yakima Landing Pad system with round crossbars. I think the biggest box I've seen used is the Thule Force L or XL. Big boxes have big negatives be aware of this. Its very easy to pack even smaller boxes too heavy. In addition, larger boxes are difficult to store when they are out of the car. They also don't allow you space to put other items on the roof. The long narrow boxes allow the bike space plus the box. The box weighs less meaning more gear weight potential and they are easier to store out of the car. Just some box experience from a regular user Do a quick search, there's quite a few wires on the boxes. I have a Yakima Skybox 16,482.9 KB Views: $830 Do a quick search, there's quite a few wires on the boxes. I have a Yakima Skybox 16 After some research, I also went with the Skybox 16. Personally, I think it's a great game for the car. I would keep in mind what another poster pointed out - you won't be able to fit many others on the crossbars of the factory, as the box is wide enough. If you're just looking to have the box up there, I think that's the way to go. · Starter Discussion - #6 - August 1, 2018 Thank you all! yes, I'm just trying to put the box up there. We have the Limited. I'm going to see Skybox 16. · Skybox 16 or Thule Force XL should fit over the factory roof support. · We're very happy with this one: SportRack Vista XL Rear Aperture Loading Box (Black, 18 Feet Cubes) cm_sw_r_cp_apa_i_BsNyBb6B489C4 Used for our trip from South Carolina to Alaska and held it beautifully. to use it for years to come. It has 18 cubic feet, as opposed to the 16 of the Skybox a. Recommended! EDIT: I just realized I got it on an open box deal for two hundred dollars! Much more expensive at the moment. · I'm currently on a 2k mile blast from SoCal across the northern AZ using the Yakima Showcase 15. Fits like a dream and you won't notice it's there. I take about a 1-2 mpg hit, but it's relative and common on all the boxes Today I just finished a nice nasty stormy trip between Jerome and Flagstaff. Flagstaff. in places, but no water inside. The Showcase has the high-shine finish that matches the cars and it has the new pushbutton aperture mechanism. Both sides open which is very nice. They make a 20, but it comes out far, but not the 15 not much. I used it 2 years in a row in the sun, heat and rain and it's a very good IMHO unit. 2k miles in 8 days. No complaints or worries. Angels sing with heavenly voices. · Will the yakima 16 skybox clear the antennae fin and rear hatch ok? Thank you in advance. · We have the Yakima 18 skybox and it comes off, it's right in front of the hatch flap when the hatch is open. I probably have between 16-20k miles with it on the roof with no real problem yet. When it's cold and overloaded the lock/latches to get tight to work. · I have a Yakima Skybox 21 on my 2018 Outback. Not a problem at all if I put the hatch opener to stop about 1.5 before its normal shutdown. (see owners' manual) If I don't put the hatch opener, all I need is a light lift at the right time and it doesn't interfere with the Yakima. I also used a dowel rod to lift the Yakima just a skosh to clear it with good results. Results.
