Rainbow dash jar video

On November 30, 2014, Tumblr user cooldudebro posted a photo of the jar from the November 27 theme, quoting the post (shown below). The post has received more than 21,700 likes and reblogs over five years. In the days that followed, the story was widely circulated online, with many blogs and news outeries reporting on the topic. This includes articles by Horse News, Jezebel, Buzzfeed and Gawker. In the following years, the users behind the project made many follow-up posts about the projects. For example, on February 6, 2016, users revealed that he was using a separate vial for ejaculation and pouring the product into the original (shown below, left). On January 9, 2017, users announced that he had transferred the Rainbow Dash statue and the rest of the vase content into a more compact jar, also providing a video recording of the process (the post is shown below, right). Starting around 2014, screenshots of Cooldudebros' Tumblr post about the Pony Cum Jar Project have been widely circulated online. Starting around March 2017, meme reaction to the jar has become particularly popular on iFunny (example shown below). In the following years, many posts mentioning the project were posted on iFunny, Twitter and other online platforms, with a noticeable increase in the number of posts starting in August 2019. For example, one June 9, 2019, a post by iFunny Avuelix user received more than 1,700 smiles in six months (shown below, left). An August 21, 2019 post by Twitter user @YIZHENS received more than 7,100 retweets and 21,700 likes in four months (shown below, middle). An October 2019 post by Instagrammers.mp4 attracted more than 130,400 views and 27,700 likes in two months (shown below, right). In October 2019, some iFunny users started or posted memes in which they pretended to start Cum Jar projects with different statues. On October 4, 2019, iFunny mikuCumJarProject (User_69420) user announced that he would fill a glass jar containing a Hatsune Miku statue with his sperm, with the October 8 post showing the statue and jar delivered gaining more than 2,000 smiles (posts shown below, between and left). However, as of December 11, 2019, no images confirming that the project has been started. Starting november 21, 2019, iFunny EpsteinCumJarProject users (also EpsteinCoomJarProject) posted progressive photos of a jar containing a statue of Jeffrey Epstein filled with semen (e.g. pictured below, right). Katie Katie BuzzFeed News Reporter Published January 12, 2017, 5:43 p.m.m. ET When BuzzFeed reported on this in 2014, we wrote: The original poster stated that for some iithggy reason he collected his ejaculation in a jar containing a statue of Rainbow Dash from My Little Pony. Name for this little effort? Project Pony Cum Jar. He unfortunately stored his jar too close to a radiator, accidentally boiling his My Little Pony statue in his own semen liquid. In 4chan's original post, he claimed that the smell was too bad and he gave it up. He also said that he planned to bury the jar (as one of them). But the jar prevailed. And this week, our hero returned triumphantly to the board/mlp to post what he said might be the final update to the saga: He is turning it into a safer jar. He posted a video of the transfer, from a jar that looked like another jar of Yankee Candles (???) to another, safer than the jar. Waiting for the exciting moment when Rainbow Dash finally appears! BuzzFeed contacted the jizzmaster via email and asked him: Why? Sheer curiosity and scientific research, he replied. Looks good. Good.
