I can't get it out of my mouth. Not so much denying or afraid to face the fact that my girl is growing up-a Elaine Benes thing more. Did you see seinfeld's episode where the girl at the party kept talking about her fiancé? ('My fiancée said that' and 'That's what my fiancée said' and 'Have you seen my fiancée????') That's how I feel about the word boyfriend. ('My daughter's boyfriend said that' and 'My daughter's boyfriend said that' and 'Have you seen my daughter's boyfriend????') Anyway, my daughter Alex and her friend, Mauricio, enjoy this photo! If you don't know what Drummond meant in episode ten of Seinfeld's third season, The Stranded, Elaine is at a party with a woman who doesn't stop talking about her fiancé instead of named her by name. This is Elaine, who annoys the response by mocking her. You can watch the full clip below. This content is transferred from YouTube. In an interview with People, Laney said she went into childbirth at their Nashville home on the morning of June 6, but later said she was in need of childbirth. Go to a nearby hospital after midwives noticed the baby's heart rate was decreasing. Oakleigh was in my abdominal cavity, and that was all the pressure. Said. But we didn't know that at the time, obviously. This content is imported from Instagram. You can find the same content in another format or find more information on their website. When the couple arrived at the hospital, doctors ordered an emergency C-section. Laney underwent life-threatening surgery for two hours. The surgery never seemed to end and someone would come up to me and keep saying things I didn't really understand, 'We may have to use this much to change this blood,' walker said. That's when I started worrying about my wife's life, and of course I'm freaking out. Laney's uterus was torn. Oakleigh was deprived of blood flow and choked to death. Walker said a nurse asked him when he told him the sad news. How do I tell Laney when she wakes up? How do I explain, she's a girl, but you know, she's dead? I knew this would crush Laney. He then began to worry about his wife's health, adding: I was hoping this wouldn't be the worst day of my life. Laney survived and has since recovered from the physical trauma of childbirth. However, losing a child took much longer to overcome the emotional damage. Laney and I cried a lot, Walker shared. But one thing that makes me happiest is how much love we have around us. We received the most remarkable questions and advice from people in our neighborhood and on the lines of introduction and greeting. People come to me and tell me about their lives. I don't even know these people. Walker had to publicly share Okleigh's passing after cancelling her CMT performance due to her death. This content is imported from Instagram. Natalie Wood's life and unsightly death are discovered in the new HBO documentary Natalie Wood: What Remains Behind.Natalie Wood died on Nov. 29, 1981 after drowning off the coast of Santa Catalina Island in California. In the new film, Natalie's daughter Natasha Gregson Wagner sits down to interview actor Robert Wagner, his stepfather and Natalie's husband from 1972 to 1981. Natasha said Robert would give his life for Natalie. When it comes to the death of legendary actress Natalie Wood, who mysteriously drowned off Santa Catalina Island in 1981, there are many questions and a few answers even today. Although her daughter Natasha Gregson Wagner never realizes she never learns the full story of what happened to her mother, she is eager to celebrate the life of the new HBO documentary star produced called Natalie Wood: What remains to honor her mother's legacy Behind.To, natasha focuses on much of the film - which premieres Tuesday, May 5 9 p.m ET - to Natalie's burgeoning career as a Hollywood power center. At the same time, Natasha and her stepfather, actor Robert Wagner (who was married to Natalie between 1957 and 1962, and then again from 1972 to 1981), also addressed the night she disappeared from the family's yacht. Tragically, in the early hours of November 29, 1981, the 43-year-old actress was found dead in the waters. In the documentary, Natasha asked Robert, who was on a yacht with Natalie the night she disappeared, to tell her side of the story. According to the actor, he, Natalie and actor Christopher Walken went to dinner offshore for 28,000 nights. On his way back to the boat after dinner, Robert said he got into an argument with Christopher about alcohol. It should work. Apparently, Natalie went below deck to go to bed as the two men (eventually without their differences) continued. But when Robert went to join Natalie, he and yatsa sandals were gone. This content is transferred from YouTube. You can find the same content in another format or find more information on their website. Nobody heard anything, Robert tells Natasha in the documentary. As they both responded to tears, Robert continued to recall the moment authorities learned he had found Natalie's body in the water. It crossed my mind many times that night. At first, Natalie's death was treated as an accident. But when the case reopened in 2011, the Los Angeles County Medical Examiner's Office changed the cause of death from accidental drowning to strangulation and other unspecified factors. Then, in 2018, Robert became a suspect in the investigation. However, when talking to her stepfather, Natasha made it clear what she thought of Robert and speculation about the case. Natasha, for many years, we were advised not to talk about it or ignore it. Says. But that's enough. I know that if my mother was in any trouble, she'd give her life for him. That's right, Robert says after hearing Natasha's response. He said that because he knows me and he knows I didn't do anything to hurt his mother. Reflecting on her heart-wrenching interview with her stepfather, Natasha explains why she chose to get him to talk about her mother's death. I wanted to have a conversation about other things in the past, but like the camera. Said. I wanted him to feel safe enough to come out like a flower and be honest and show his humanity. That was my intention, or my intention in that meeting. When asked over the years if she had had versions of this conversation with her stepfather about her mother's death, Natasha agreed. I'm really glad we did. Said. It was absolutely exhausting. He and I both pretty much sned it down at the end of those two days - but we were also very enthusiastic kind, because we thought something really hard had gone together. When you take something and put it in the light, it doesn't feel like hindering it, and that's what we were doing. We were just taking the truth and bringing it into the light, and it kind of strengthened us, I guess.
