Their dream of discovering the true origins of Element 115 reveals in a hellish nightmare. — It's called a dead-level description. Call the Dead is the ninth call of a th: black ops zombies map. Treyarch called it a unique zombie experience and is a very special creation for all zombie fans. The level is the first to feature actual celebrities fighting zombies and features George A. Romero as one of the zombies. Call of the Dead is found in an abandoned group of 935 Siberian outposts, which features a shipwreck, a bustling lighthouse and a rare coastline. Review[edit | source edit] It's an anchor away for grievous bodily harm! In this epic survival story, inspired by legendary writer and director George A. Romero, a group of four fearless explorers fight for their lives among an army of bloodthirsty Russian zombies. History with our heroes stranded in the frozen wilderness of a forgotten Siberian outpost. On the hunt for the origins of the mysterious mysterious 115, they head to the site of an ancient meteor impact crater, but their ship mysteriously moves stuck. In the midst of a terrifying snowstorm, our fearless adventurers inadvertently unleash an unearthly horde of unreasonable zombies. From the abandoned lighthouse on the island to the shipwreck of an ocean liner and an uncertain pinch between them, it's murder or murder. And with shipowners of zombie Russian soldiers, divers and sailors rising from the frozen land and icy waters, it will not be easy, especially given the deadly surprise that a particular (and somewhat remarkable) Zombie has in mind. - Cry of the Dead plot résumé Call the Dead is the sixth largest Zombies card behindMob of the Dead, Moon, Green Run, Die Rise and Origin. Players were loaded ashore with up to three other teammates, with George A. Romero being thrown by lightning into a nearby pool of water. There are two chalk weapons outlined there, as in the last three calls of the th: Black Ops Zombies cards, Olympia and M14. Players can choose to open one of two different boats to clear, both costing 750 points. One leads to the lighthouse and the other leads to the broken ship. The power switch is located at the top of the ship, which has the flanker on the second floor side. A new face, Deadsgut Daykiri, is located at the very top of the lighthouse, with a price tag of 1500 points. The Matryoshka dolls return from Ascension, along with the new Miracle Weapon, V-R11 makes its debut in this map, with the ability to transform zombies back into humans, then drift away in fear and kill themselves by throwing themselves into the icy water (or killed by the player), along with the ability to calm George (temporarily) and make teammates do endless damage and not be hurt by zombies. The object that was shot by the V-R11 can cause distraction among zombies and George Romero, so the subject can be killed by the horde or George Romero. Another miracle weapon is the Skyvest: Sniper rifle that shoots explosive bolts that deal with very large damage. When Pack-a-punched, the bench becomes Hyena Infra-Dead, inflicting even more damage, including a larger splash radius. Hyena Infra-Dead also has thermal range. When George A. Romero appeared in the first round, he appeared in a calm state, slowly walking toward the player while shouting threats. He also seems to have extremely high health, 250,000 per player in the game (i.e. there are 250,000 health in solo, 500,000 with two players, etc.). This damages him or allows him to hit a player triggering Berserk Mode, causing him to shout first and then chase the nearest player wildly attacking and spontaneously roaring and growling. He calmed down if he went back into the water. The player receives 10 shooting points when he is calm and of the water. But that'll him off. Contrary to popular belief, the V-R11 did not turn George A. Romero back into a man, only managing to turn him back into Calm State for a period of time. Using a Pack-a-Punched V-R11 on it while he's crazy will bring him back to a calm state until he's provoked back into the water, causing him to disappear for a limited period of time, after which he returns. Players can kill George, although it will take time and effort. One of the best ways to kill George is with Hyena Infra-Dead or with a gun to the players. After the defeat, players are rewarded with a bottle of Random Perk and Death Machine (or Lightning Bolt under certain circumstances), and George will return to the water for the current and next rounds. He then returns to a casual pool in full health. Also on the map are easter eggs Stand-in and Ensemble voices. The Easter egg consists of the original characters trapped in a small dark room, after Richtofen apparently influenced the Kazimir Mechanism to beam all of them to this Siberian outpost. Richtofen exclaimed that they were sent too far into the future during the Easter egg. The release of the original characters serves as the largest Easter egg on the map and gives lightning bolt power-up, giving the player Wunderwaffe DG-2. Without more need for him, Richtofen leaves it for the celebrities. Zombies can also become electrified, causing a slight blue aura around them and an electrical impulse to encircle them. These special types appear when George hits his spotlight on the ground or shouts (which causes sprinters). If the player is attacked by an electrified zombie, their movement will be slowed and an electric shock will pass through the screen (similar to a blow from George's spotlight or passing through an electric trap). Pearl works in three different ways: it makes crosshair smaller in the same way as Steady Aim, which makes sniper rifles idling and works as an improved target assistant; When the player will aim down the sights while looking near a zombie, it will lock to the zombie's head instead of the chest. In the computer, it only increases the accuracy of a hip-fire similar to Steady Aim. Deadshot Daiquiri Theme & Easter Eggs[edit| source edit] Radio stations[edit source] Main article: Call of the Secret Song of Deadshot/Radios[edit source] There are a total of three hidden rocks around the map The first rock can be found in the barrel of the boat that leads to the lighthouse. The second rock can be found in the ship in the Diner. The third stone can be found in the PhD Flopper hall under a small table. Main article: Unsupported for dying From left to right they are: M. Shadows, Z Vengeance, Synyster Gates, Johnny Christ and deceased drummer Rev. [1] New features[edit]] Double beer returns after his absence in Ascension. The MP40 returns after its absence of Five and Ascension Magistrate, a new sniper rifle that fires extremely powerful explosive bolts. This is the first map of zombies to have only one window in the ambush room (although the zombies bench from the ground). There are two Ziplines: one from the ship to the shore and the other goes from the lighthouse to the ship. New Zombie Type: Electrified zombies that are created through george electric light scene. George A. Romero guest stars as a special zombie, but instead of having his own round, he will appear in Round 1 and follow the player until he gets better. All original Perk-a-Cola machines and a new one called Deadshot Daykeri are available on this map. The flanker removes the players from the ship and climbs to the bottom of the lighthouse. A new weapon called V-R11 turns a zombie back into its human state. The water on the card will cause freezing to accumulate on the player screen, dazzling and eventually freezing the player. In addition, Will act on Zombies much in the same way as the Winter City freezing them in ice blocks, allowing them to easily crash. When you wrap yourself in ice hit by a player or zombie will free them from the ice. The headlight beam will show where the Pack-A-Punch machine is when the power is turned on. That's because it moves around the map. The weather sometimes changes from snow difficult with fog, to light blaze with easy visibility. When the weather changes, the character of the player will make a comment about it. Great lightning will occur when the Pack-A-Punch machine comes out or enters a place. Wunderwaffe DG-2 is available as a power supply, it is won by the murder of George A. Romero after the main Easter egg is completed by a player or after completing the main Easter egg in a match. An ice skating that leads to sickle and speed coke. Mobile version[edit source] Call of the Dead was published via an invitation-to-work update: Black Ops Zombies Zombies on July 19, 2012. Now it's called Call of the Dead: Director's Cut. Instead of hoping for the celebrities who were on the original map, he had Tank Dempsey, Nikolai Belinsky, Takeo Masaki and Edward Richtofen, because of why the stand-in Easter egg had been removed. The map has also been slightly altered. The window on the roof of the boat already has sandbags in front of it. The rock that filled the gap in the bridge that is in the spawning is gone. The rails on the roof of the ship are not rigid. A man can go through them and fall. Some of the rocks are incomplete, leaving some of the rocks to float in the air. Scavenger is not currently present in this version. George A. Romero has short black hair. Romero can be heard talking. Romero: Well, I've always liked the monster in the idea. I like zombies being us. It's like zombies are blue-collar monsters. The beaon appears on the screen with a flash behind it. Zombies begin to attack Danny Trejo and Robert Englund and both try to fight them. Englund: We're totally screwed! Englund is piercing a zombie with his fork and Michael Rooker is then seen killing zombies with two Guns. Rooker: Are you girls joking? I prayed for that! Come on, come on! Behind Rooker opens a door to the lighthouse, and Sarah Michelle Gellar kicks the zombie carcass down the stairs leading to the door. Gelular: Guys... Let's get back to work. Action music starts playing and all four characters continue to kill zombies. A zombie comes to attack Rooker from behind. Rooker turns around and tries to hit a zombie on the shoulder, but misses. The zombie stops attacking, looks at the camera, and starts talking. Fake zombie: For God's sake, I missed him again! Romero: Cut! Are you blind, man? Romero picks up one of Rooker's rifles and goes to Englund to show how Rooker had to knock out the zombie for the movie. Romero: That's it. Romero punches Entlund in the face with the butt of the rifle. Englund: OOOWWW! Romero: See? Trejo: It's not like that, I do it like that. Traio runs to the bottom of his machete on Engled's head. Danny! Gellar: I do it like this. Geller kicked Entlund in the chest, hitting him on the back. A real zombie comes out of props on the window. Romero: Go back to hair and makeup. You don't look dead enough! Fake zombie attempts to take a real zombie from the shoulder to escort him to his hair and makeup. Fake zombie: Come on, let's go. The real zombie throws a fake to the ground, picks up Romero and runs with him. Rooker: That's not in the script. Trejo: We're writing a new one! It's called maggots! Heard! Slaughter! Englund: It's a real nightmare! Englund hammers a zombie approach with his tar Sara beat a zombie in the back with sickle Gellar: Let's kill some keyboards! Trejo cut two zombie necks, passes another zombie through and slits his neck. Gellar kicks undemanding in the mouth as Englund stabs a zombie with his stump and throws him to the ground, stabbing him again to kill him. Rooker kills some zombies with rifles, and shoots at the camera as the movie ends. End transcript Scene Images of zombies and lighthouse flashes as George Romero begins to speak in a dark room. Romero: Years ago, I did research for a World War II movie. I ran into old Nazis. I couldn't believe what I was reading. Several images showing the Group 935 logo and the Lab of Five are visible: Element 115, necromans, resurrecting the dead, truly creepy things. Flashes of four celebrities fighting against zombies are visible. Trajo (flashback): We're completely surrounded! Rooker (flashback): Come on! Back to the dark room with Romero. Romero: The coolest thing? Some of these crazy things happened right here. Flashes of celebrity are visible again. Romero The Dead series of horror films. On one of Der Reese's signs, there's a picture of a wrecked ship from a lighthouse. Call of the Dead has no specific initial mystery box point thrown, so spawns randomly every game. But he'll never show up in the starting room. None of the weapons, apart from the sickle at the beginning, can be used during play. According to radio stations, this is a former group 935 facility where Richtofen tested on the original characters. In an intro, when Michael Rooker fires dozens of smoking rifles at zombies, he fires three shots from a gun without reloading. On the charging screen, players can see the Ascension and Shangri-La charging screens. The poster for the film is similar to There's a Soldier in all of us in various Black Operations commercials. Michael Rooker was seen with an AK-47, but the weapon could not be found on the map. Unlike consoles that have hands disappear completely from view when ziplining, the mobile version of this game has one hand hanging on the line while the other is invisible. The Revelations radio can be found in the Shangri-La section of the map, which states that the Cry of the Dead has been missing for six weeks in Siberia. This card was pre-melted into Black Ops 4 as Tagger Toen. References[edit source] Call for a th: Black Tail Zombie content is available under CC-BY-SA unless otherwise specified. Noted.
