I made my Sword of the Spirit some time ago and I realized that kinda didn't pick a good sword for him (Muramasa. So does anyone have suggestions that swords are the best for Spirit weapons and can easily get another one for repairs? © 2020, NEXON Korea Corporation and NEXON America Inc. All rights are reserved. Mabinogi Spirit Weapon Feeding Guide skybontLately, I get a lot of questions about ego feeding. What do you feed your ego? What to do? When is the right time? Some of you might say, well, there are wikis. All I can say is that, yes, it answers yours, what and how. In this topic, I will post what the specifics are and why are these specifics and not other things? The following content can be completely biased and based on my own experience plus some information on the wikis combined. It may not be your ideal way, because that's my way. A quick guide to learning what to feed to get the fastest speed when feeding your ego to certain statistics. I can explain it thoroughly, but I don't feel like it; plus, just follow this guide and believe me. It is much faster than diamonds and cost effective. First of all the rule is only to feed it with elements between 1'999gold. For the fastest efficiency, feed it the most expensive, but no more than the base price of 1000. Second, feed your ego at stage 1'4 Unfortunate until he reaches the penalty. Stop at Fine.Why 1'999gold and why For the fastest efficiency, feed it the most expensive, but no more than the base price of 1000.? There is a technical answer to this part. I can explain it to you; If you want to know the answer, please check my first response in this topic... The base price is the price of an item in the NPC without discounts - Filia discounts or discounts on Wednesday. (e.g., a lute (usually 1,000 gold) is sold for 900 pounds in Filia if you're allied to the elves; however, it's not considered a point for a 1'999gold item). It is effective to buy things in Filia because they have discounts there. Don't worry, it won't diminish the experience your ego will get just because the item is discounted; it will still get the same exp at a lower price compared to other stores. A detailed explanation at the bottom of this first post, according to P.S. Also, note based on my experience and a few statistics, it is better to have your STR level 35 before you focus on other statistics. Why? Because if you freakin' don't have a level of 35 You better use an upgraded/enchanted weapon that has almost the same damage as a level 30 STR one. However, I suggest maxing out STR first. After STR maxed out, I suggest Will to increase durability and a slight increase in the increase Maximum damage Then, luck for more critical, as well as a slight increase for maximum damage. For your convenience, I have placed here a specific class of weapons and floor and the best food to give to your ego. I'll also include some Filia items that could save you a little bit of your pocket.

----- To begin with:
----- a few notes: As many feeds as possible that cost 800g-900g. The best ones are Bucket, Culinary Knife, Sandals, Sasha Robes, Cores' Thief Gloves, and various number marks. Sticks are not complete due to lack of information, but please try these items for your own. You will see some or in my recommendation; this is because I want to list an item from Filia too; which can be a lot for other people, even if it's not as fast as the other one that can't be bought in Filia. For my own convenience with regard to the number of marks that are limited sales from the price, I put M on Monday, T on Tuesday, and so on.

----- P.S. Fun Fact and, additional information about the discount on Filia. There seems to be a strange attitude out there or something... Sky theory: the more expensive the product, the more discounts it receives. For example, Sasha Robe and Lute in Filia. Sasha Robe's base price in Filia (well, it's the only place where it's sold) is 990g. The base price of the lute in Filia is 1000g. However, when we include a discount (if you're an ally), here are the prices: Sasha You'll notice that Sasha Robe has a 50g discount while the lute has a discount of 100g. Their basic price difference is just 10g though. See the difference? Well though, knowing this, I would still suggest you buy items that don't exceed 1000g in base price. A detailed explanation of why the 1'999gold item and why for the fastest efficiency, feed it the most expensive, but no more than the base price of 1000. First, it's the first. Here's general knowledge. Whenever the Ego reduces appetite (wants to communicate/wants an item), it loses 100% value on hunger. Here's another basic knowledge. 1g-999g base price items recover back 20% value on your appetite. 40% per 1000g 1,999g 60% for 2,000g 2,999g, 80% for 3000g 3,999g 100% for 4000g and up. Here's the observatory's knowledge from Sky. The more expensive the product, the lower the EXP:Gold ratio. That is, the higher the price, the smaller the EXP. (e.g.): An item worth 400g the base price gives 50EXP per lv30 STR. Another item costs 800 grams of the base price gives 80EXP per lv30 STR. The ratio to cheaper goods is 400g:50EXP - 8g:1EXP. That is, for every 8 gold, you get 1 EXP. The ratio to the more expensive product is 800g:80EXP - 10g:1EXP. That is, for every 10 gold, you get 1 EXP. Now you ask, can't we just feed them, like, 100 grams of stuff? Yes you can. However, the time it takes for alk only to align once on the stats increases dramatically. Instead of just ego-feeding a total of 100 hours with more expensive, you need an ego to feed for a total of maybe 200 hours. Then, you ask, well, I get your point about feeding it to more expensive items in relation to the time it takes. But why did you say: For the fastest efficiency, feed it the most expensive, but no more than the base price of 1000? Why not? Jk JK. But seriously, just as I pointed out above, the ego is hungry and loses 100% appetite. How to fill it back? With 5 pieces of 1'999g items, or with 2 pieces 1000 -1,999 items and 1 piece 1'999g item?

Then apply the rule as well, as I said earlier, the higher the price, the smaller the EXP. The 2 parts of the 900g item is likely to give a higher exp than a 1 piece of 1900g item. And finally, to apply my last argument - time. Instead of feeding 5 pieces of 600g item, feed it with 5 pieces of 900g items. The time spent feeding the ego to level the stats is likely to be reduced by one-fourth, if not one-third. There's an issue raised by my guildmate regarding Filia discount prices - relative to - EXP gives, I'd like to prove a bit why. cookienoob: just out of curiosity, no ego food sold in filia supposedly give you a little less exp than the more expensive in places like Dunbarton, emain, etc... For example onion from meles will give less exp than one of nerys nerys Osla. cookienoob: Actually I think it is, but not a big difference. For example, I just tried it. a short bow that costs less from the shallows gave me 14 social and 73 str. The regular price of one of the nicca gave me 15 social and 81 pages so yes hardly the difference. In fact their base price is different. You'll notice that there's a difference. For example, in Elena (360 g base price) and in Esla (500 grams of base price). I think you've mixed it up with a Filia discount. Let's see... If you want to know the base price of the goods in Filia, you can go and try to see their price when you are not associated with them (regular price). The discount in Filia is similar to the discount on Wednesday. They don't change the base price of a product. However, when there is a difference between the different NPCs (like The Ellen-Donkey that I said there), the experience will change.P.S. I checked your cookie sighting and it seems that I was right. On the example of Sasha Robe. It costs 990g at the base price (I used a non-union account to buy Sasha Robe). But then, it also costs 940g at a discounted filia price. I fed like Sasha Robe I bought at a discounted price and base price. Both gave 29 social and 100 good luck. So, it's even better to buy at the price of Filia because you pay a little less than the real price, and still get the same experience. Experience.
