He is best known for creating and producing a number of TV series, as Popular (1998-2000), Nip/Tuck (2003-2015), American Horror Story (2011-present), Scream Queens (2015-2016), Pose (2018-present), 9-1-1 (2018-present), 9-1-1: The Lone Star (2020present) and Ratched (2020-present). Murphy also directed the 2006 film adaptation of Augusten Burroughs' memoir Run with Scissors, the 2014 film adaptation of The Prom. Murphy received six Primetime Emmy Awards out of 32 nominations, a Tony Award from two nominations, and two Grammy Award nominations. He was often cited as the most powerful man in modern television, including that he signed the biggest development agreement in television, including that has brought marginalized characters to the masses. He was born on November 9, 1965, in Indianapolis, Indiana, where he grew up in an Irish Catholic family. [5] He attended Catholic school in Indianapolis. He described his mother, J. Andy Murphy, as a beauty queen who left it all to stay home and take care of her two sons. She wrote five books and worked in communication for more than 20 years before retiring. His father worked in the newspaper industry as director of circulation before retiring after 30 years. [7] After coming out as gay, Murphy saw his first therapist, who found nothing wrong with him other than being too premature for his own good. [7] During a 2012 interview on Inside the Actors Studio, Murphy claimed that he secretly dated a lot of high school football players. As a child he performed with the choir, who later reported on his work on Glee. Murphy attended Indiana University Bloomington, where he specialized in journalism and was a member of the vocal ensemble Singing Hoosiers. In 1986, he was interned at The Washington Post alongside reporter Kara Swisher. It was placed in the style section. [9] Career 1990-2008: Beginnings, Popular and Nip/Tuck Murphy began as a journalist working for the Miami Herald, Los Angeles Times, New York Daily News, Knoxville News Sentinel and Weekly. He began writing screenwriting in the late 1990s, when Steven Spielberg bought the screenplay Why Can't I Be Audrey Hepburn?. [7] Murphy began his television career with the teen comedy series Popular, which he co-created with Gina Matthews. On September 29, 1999,[10] she premiered in the WB series and ran for two seasons, ending in 2001. During this time, his production company Ryan Murphy Productions signed a deal with Warners. [11] He then created the FX drama series Nip/Tuck, which premiered on April 18. In 2004, Murphy took the show's signature line, Tell Me What You Don't Like About Yourself, from a plastic surgeon he met when he was a journalist researching a secret story about plastic surgery in Beverly Hills. The series ended after six seasons in 2010. In 2006, Murphy wrote the screenplay and directed the feature film Running with Scissors. Based on the memoir by Augusten Burroughs, the film version starred Annette Bening, Alec Baldwin and Brian Cox and, as young Burroughs, Joseph Cross. 2009-2017: Mainstream success with Glee and American Horror Story May 19, 2009, Murphy's musical comedy-drama series, Glee, premiered on Fox. He co-created the series with Brad Falchuk and Ian Brennan. In its early seasons, the show was critically praised. Murphy won his first Primetime Emmy award for directing a pilot episode. The series ended in 2015 after a sixth season. [14] Murphy was one of four executive producers in the TELEVISION series The Glee Project, which premiered on Oxygen 12. [15] The show featured a group of contestants vying for the prize of a seven-episode arc on Glee, with someone who is eliminated each week until the winner is selected in the last episode. The show was renewed for a second season, which ended as its last. In 2010, Murphy directed Julia Roberts in an adaptation of Elizabeth Gilbert's memoir Eat, Pray, Love. The film was a box office success, but a critical failure, receiving harsh reviews criticizing its pace and lack of credibility. To date, the film has grossed $204,482,125 worldwide. [17] Murphy and Falchuk created an anthology called American Horror Story, which premiered on FX on October 5, 2011. Most of the same actors played different characters in different characters in different settings each subsequent season. [18] [19] Murphy and Glee co-executive producer Ali Adler created the half-hour comedy The New Normal, which premiered on NBC on September 10, 2012. The series was based on Murphy's own experience of having a baby through a surrogate, with the main characters, Bryan and David, named after one season. [21] Murphy went on to direct larry kramer's tv movie adaptation Play Normal Heart, starring Mark Ruffalo, Roberts, Baldwin, Jonathan Groff, Matt Bomer and Jim Parsons. [22] Murphy then collaborated with The Normal Heart executive producer Jason Blum to produce a meta-slate on the cult classic horror film The Town That Dreaded Sundown. [23] The film was the directorial debut of Alfonso Gomez-Rejon and was released in 2014. In October 2014, FX greenlit companion anthology series, American Crime Story, which Murphy and Falchuk executive produce. The series premiered on February 2, 2016. [24] Murphy, Falchuk and Brennan co-created the comedy horror series Scream Queens, which premiered on Fox on February 22, 2016. The series was canceled after two seasons. [26] Murphy's next project, the dramatic anthology series Feud, premiered on FX in 2017. The first season focused on the rivalry between Bette Davis and Joan Crawford on the set of their 1962 film What Happened to Baby Jane?. [28] 2018-present: Further recognition with Pose and transition to Netflix In 2018, Murphy co-created the police procedural drama series 9-1-1. He also worked as a director, writer and executive producer on the series. With rookie Steven Canals, Dustin Lance Black's research assistant before his Master of Fine Arts at UCLA, Murphy and Falchuk launched a new series, Pose, which takes place in the Ball community in the mid-1980s. Murphy wanted to adapt Paris is Burning as a series[29] and Canals wrote the script while in graduate school he focused on young African-American teens from the homeless for being gay, who moved to New York with dreams of going to dance school and who became adopted by the mother of the house. [30] Murphy and Falchuk joined Canals, Murphy and Falchuk in the writing room were Our Lady J and Janet Mock, who Murphy also encouraged to direct the episode, [29] which made her the first of color to do so, as well as the first trans woman of color in the tv series writing room. The series premiered on FX on June 3, 2018, sparking criticism. [31] The first season boasted the largest cast of transgender actors in history for the screenplay of a network series with more than 50 transgender characters played by trans actors. [33] On July 12, 2018, it was announced that the series had been renewed for a second season, which premiere, Murphy announced that he would donate all of his Pose profits to charities working with LGBTQ+ people, tweeting various nonprofits, including the Sylvia Rivera Law Project,[36] the Transgender Legal Defense & amp; Education Fund,[37] and the Callen-Lorde Community Health Center[38] tells Variety that: The thing that hit me when I talked to so many of them was how much they tried, how under attack they felt, how many of them were difficult to get health care, and find work. I just I have to do more than just do a show for this community. I want to come together and help this community. In 2018, Netflix signed a development agreement with Murphy to compensate for $300 million over five years. [40] In September 2019, The Politician was released on Netflix for generally positive reviews. The series was nominated for two Golden Globe awards and renewed for a second season, which was due for release in late 2020. Murphy then co-created the 9-1-1 spin-off series 9-1-1: Lone Star, which premiered on Fox in January 2020, the period hollywood miniseries was released for mixed reviews. Murphy served as co-creator, writer and director for the series. In June 2020, in honor of the 50th [42] [43] In the media (I-r) the governor appointed Don Norte, Murphy, and Norte's husband, gay activist Kevin Norte, spring time GLAAD 2010 is a charity event in Century City, Los Angeles, California. In October 2015, Murphy received the Inspiration Award from amfAR, the AIDS Research Foundation for his contributions to television and film, as well as his work in the fight against AIDS. [44] In 2017, Murphy launched Poloodutej, which aims to make Hollywood more inclusive by creating equal opportunities for women and minorities behind the camera. Less than a year after half's launch, Ryan Murphy Television's director of the slate hired 60% of female directors and 90% met his wife & amp; minority requirement. In conjunction with recruitment goals, the initiative launched a half-director mentorship program, in which every director on every Ryan Murphy TV mentor who appears on women and minority directors, through pre-production, along with offering a significant salary for their commitment. Filmmaker Kristin Fairweather, the first half award winner, described her experience in an interview with Screen Comment's Rudy Cecera. [45] Murphy's failed projects also created and produced various failed TELEVISION pilots. WB sitcom pilot St. Sass, starring Delta Burke and Heather Matarazzo, has not been picked up. In 2008, Murphy wrote and directed fx pilot Pretty/Handsome, which was also not picked up. [46] By April 2013, HBO had placed a pilot order for Murphy's sexual drama Open, which began filming at the end of 2013. [47] By September 2014, HBO had decided not to continue the series. [48] Murphy also had several films in development: Dirty Tricks, Political Comedy, One Hit Wonders, musical comedy and the sequel To The Normal Heart. In 2014, Murphy developed a feature film about the life of reclusive heiress Huguette Clark, based on the bestselling book Empty Mansions: The Mysterious Life of Huguette Clark and the Spending of a Great Happiness. Since their announcement, there has been no development of these films. Murphy's personal life grew up in a Catholic household, but he was done with the church when he left it; however, he still goes to church sometimes. [5] He serves on the National Advisory Council of Young Storytellers. He once owned a house designed by renowned mid-century modern architect Carl Maston. [50] In an interview about his show Pose, which took place in 1987, during the height of the initial AIDS crisis, Murphy described his concerns about contracting HIV while in college, getting tested frequently, albeit celibacy. She has been married to photographer David Miller since July 2012. On December 24, 2012, Murphy and Miller welcomed their first child, son Logan Phineas, through a surrogate mother. They welcomed their second son, Ford, on October 6, 2014. They welcomed their third son, Griffin Sullivan, on August 18, 2020.
