The show, credited as based on characters from Stephen King's 1979 novel of the same name, which first aired in 2002, and was produced by Lionsgate Television and CBS Paramount Network Television (Paramount Network Television (2002–2006) for USA Network. The show was originally commissioned for UPN, but the network dropped the show and it was picked up by the US. [2] The series was filmed for its first five seasons in Vancouver, British Columbia, Canada. The sixth and final season was billed as The Season Changing Everything and Production was moved to Montreal. [3] The Dead Zone is expected to be renewed for a seventh season, but due to the then low ratings and the high production costs, the series was cancelled without a series final in December 2007. Some rumors spread that Syfy would pick up the series after it was canceled by the U.S., but no plans came to fruition. [4] Plot Sea also: List of dead Zone episodes Small-town teacher Johnny Smith is involved in a car accident that leaves him comatose for about six years. After regaining consciousness, Johnny begins with visions of the past and future caused by touching items or people; Doctors attribute the visions to activity in a previously unused dead zone of his brain trying to compensate for the impaired function of the passages injured in the crash. Johnny also learns his fiancée Sarah gave birth to his son in the intermediate time after accident, but has since married another man. With the help of Sarah, her husband (and village sheriff) Walt Bannerman, and physical therapist Bruce, Johnny begins using his abilities to help solve crimes. However, his efforts to do well have been complicated by intermittent visions of apocalyptic events brought about following the future election of congressional candidate Greg Stillson. Cast and characters The cast of The Dead Zone[explanation needed] Starring Anthony Michael Hall-John Robert Johnny Smith Nicole de-Sarah Anne Bracknell-Bannerman John L. Eugene Gene Purdy Bill Mondy-Deputy Roscoe Sean Patrick Flanery-Gregory Ammas Stillson Spencer Achtymichuk—John Johnny/. JJ Bannerman (seasons 1–5) Kristen Dalton—Dana Bright (seasons 1–2, 5) Frank Whaley—Christopher Wey (seasons 2–3) Sarah Wynter—Rebecca Caldwell (seasons 3–4) Jennifer Finnigan—Alexandra Alex Sinclair (seasons 4 and 6) Cara Buono—Acting Sheriff Anna Turner6) Grant L Roberts-Acting - Big Man (season 6) Former recurring Garry Chalk-James Stillson (seasons 1–4) Martin Donovan-Malcolm Janus (seasons 4–6) Laura Harris-Miranda Ellis (seasons 4–5) Characters Johnny Smith (played by Anthony Michael Hall)—A retired teacher who is due to have a car accident psychic abilities An encounter with a carnival tricks in the first episode (before the car accident) makes it clear Johnny already has some psychic abilities. After the coma, however, their nature changes from intuition to visions, the latter requiring urgent action even when they are personally inconvenient, while earlier Johnny only uses his ability on a carnival trickster to entertain his fiancée Sarah. When he undergoes one of his visions in his eye, Johnny has been shown to be able to manipulate the time localized around the vision, allowing him to stop, slowly, reverse, or forward the time relative to himself within the vision, lying him as the only one aware of his temporary changes around it and thus allowing him to further examine the details of the past, future, and sometimes the present. Sarah Bracknell Bannerman (played by Nicole de)—Johnny's former fiancée, and the mother of his son, J.J. Sarah, were married to Walt Bannerman during Johnny's coma, and the two are busy raiseing J.J. together. Sarah knew Johnny when they were children, and later taught at the same school as him. Sarah's mother died when she was a teenager, straining her relationship with her father. At the end of season 5, Sarah was pregnant with Walt's child. At the beginning of season 6, she gives birth to daughter and call her Hope. Sheriff Walt Bannerman (played by Chris Bruno)—The relationship between Johnny and Walt is initially very rocky, as Johnny often feels that Walt Sarah stole from him. Since then, however, Johnny has been showcasing his powers more and more often in law enforcement situations, Johnny becomes an asset to Walt, and the two become friends. The name Walt Bannerman is a combination of the names George Bannerman and Walt Hazlett; in the novel, George Bannerman was the sheriff, and Walt Hazlett was the man married to Sarah. At the beginning of season 6, Walt died in a fire at the Faith Heritage Chapel. However, he continued to appear in visions, flashbacks and even briefly as a ghost throughout the season. Bruce Lewis (played by John L. Adams)—A physiotherapist who helps Johnny regain his strength after his coma. Bruce is an open-minded spiritual junkie because of a religious upbringing by his shepherd father. He's Johnny's best friend and often his voice of reason, and could very well be the reason for the divergent in this series compared to the novel or 1993 movie (Johnny never tried to kill Greg Stillson before the election). An episode in season 2 even a vision of an alternate reality where instead of a physical therapist, Bruce was a reverend who never met Johnny after he woke up from his coma. And so, with the absence of his guidance, this version of Johnny has become unstable, alienated and angry driven by his abilities. Rev. Gene Purdy (played by David Ogden Stiers)—Another original character in the series; a religious leader and head of a prestigious university and foundations funded by Vera Smith, Johnny's mother. Johnny always speculated that Purdy's interest in Vera was for financial gain; however, his forces allowed him to discover that Purdy had been in love with Vera for more than 35 years. With Vera's suicide at the grief of losing her son, Purdy covered up the incident and made everyone believe she died from a heart attack, thereby preserving her dignity in the public eye. Purdy has long been involved in somewhat shadowy acts, but is always in the continual service of God. His devotion sometimes clouds his judgment, and he even went so far as to cover up a murder to protect better interests. At the end of season 6 premiere Heritage, Purdy left Cleaves Mills after being involved in a fire that kills Walt Bannerman and Malcolm Janus at the Faith Heritage Chapel. Dana Bright (played by Kristen Dalton)—A journalist for the Bangor Daily News. Dana covered much of Johnny's early work and later linked up romantically with him; she was also in a relationship with Gene Purdy. She left the show for some time and her absence wasn't explained until the Season 5 episode Articles of Faith. Because of her coverage of dana was able to move on to reporting for a television station, choosing her career ambitions above her increasingly complex relationship with Johnny. At the end of that episode when she leaves, it is shown that both port, to some extent, have feelings for each other. Greg Stillson (played by Sean Patrick Flanery)—A mentally unstable politician who has taken many illegal steps to secure an election. When he met with Johnny Smith, it became clear that Stillson would become responsible for an apocalyptic event that saw Johnny in his visions and try to prevent. After the death of Malcolm Janus (see below), Johnny's visions of a Stillson-created apocalypse quit, but after a few further revelations, they returned at the end of the season. Deputy Roscoe (played by Bill Mondy)—A deputy who works for Walt. Roscoe is usually first on the scene and very reliable. Johnny J.J. Bannerman (played by Spencer Achtymichuk (seasons 1–5) and Connor Price (season 6)—The Biological Son of Johnny and Sarah. Sarah was pregnant when Johnny had his accident, and she eventually married Walt, who raised J.J. as his own son. From the third season, Walt and Sarah told J.J. that Johnny is his real father, and Johnny has taken on more paternal duties. In the season six episode Big Top, Johnny begins to believe that J.J. inherited his powers, but J.J. appears to have covered up his innate abilities. In the series finale, J.J. has his first real vision when he sees Armageddon in his eye sharing it inside Johnny's eye during a scuffle with Greg Stillson. Malcolm Janus (played by Martin Donovan)—A power broker who believes that Greg Stillson is destined for big things. His ultimate goal is to put Stillson in the White House. He also gave Reverend Purdy a global sphere of influence in exchange for financial support from Stillson's campaigns. Janus is apparently a member of the Illuminati, as he wears a ring with their symbol. At the beginning of season 6 episode Heritage, Janus was killed in self-defense by Purdy at the Faith Heritage Chapel. Christopher Wey (played by Frank Whaley)—A man of the future who has been comatose since 2003. He wakes up to the apocalypse to discover that he has a dead zone similar to Johnny's, and that he can communicate with modern-day Johnny when both are in touch with the head of his head. Wey is revealed to be in the league with a future Johnny Smith and J.J. Rebecca Caldwell (played by Sarah Wynter)—A child psychiatrist who met Johnny during his investigation into the murder of her sister Rachel. Rebecca became Johnny's girlfriend, and at one point in time, found out that Greg Stillson may have been responsible for her sister's murder and will be responsible for the upcoming apocalypse. From the third season finale, she bought a gun in an attempt to assassination Stillson. was stopped by Johnny and discovered that Stillson Stillson to kill Rachel. She left Johnny and wants to sort things out for herself. Alex Sinclair (played by Jennifer Finnigan)—A female psychic who discovered her dead zone when she was stung by a swarm of bees (presumably killer bees) as a child and became hyper-allergic to bee stings and products. Alex first appears in the fourth season episode Double Vision where she and Johnny track a sniper together. At the end of the episode, it's clear that she and Johnny developed feelings for each other, but she decides that she's not ready to pursue the relationship. Alex appears later in the fourth season Christmas episode A Very Dead Zone Christmas where the idea of her and Johnny coming together is further explored. Anna Turner (played by Cara Buono)—The Sheriff Pro tem of Penobscot County, Anna investigates the final unofficial case of the recently deceased Sheriff Walt Bannerman. Ratings The first season averaged 6.4 million viewers, while season four averaged 3.4 million and season six averaged 2.1 million. [citation needed] The series premiere recorded 6.4 million viewers, keeping the record for highest premieres on USA Network, until it won by The 4400 premiere through The 4400 premiere that drew 7.4 million viewers. [citation needed] Music in the pilot episode, the music class practiced the song Mr. Sandman. In the same episode, Johnny and Sarah make up in his car to Sleep Walk, a song by Santo & Johnny, which also appeared in the Stephen King movie TrailerKickers. The theme song from seasons 1-3 is New Year's Prayer by Jeff Buckley. The new theme song since season 4 is Dead Zone Epic by Blues Saraceno. The promotions for season 4 featured the song Brace Yourself by Howie Day. The promotions for season 5 saw the song On My Side by INXS. The promotions for season 6 featured the song Touch Me by The Doors.
