Psn error 8002a308

This particular error code has been bugging users since it first appeared, and this prevented them from accessing PSN (PlayStation Network), which is a key feature if you want to engage in any online activity regarding your gaming experience. The error code is usually accompanied by this specific message: there has been an error. You were signed from PlayStation Network (8002A308). The error itself can be solved in a variety of ways, and users should be sure to check all the solutions below in order to treat the bug and get rid of it once and for all. Solution 1: Reboot PlayStation 3 and your router While this method probably won't work 100% of the time, resetting their PS3 worked for some users, and it's definitely the easiest way to check and implement as it only takes a couple of minutes and it doesn't require much technical knowledge.Completely turn off playStation 3 by pressing and holding the power button. Once the console is completely off, disconnect the power cord from the back of the console. Let the console stay off for at least a couple of minutes. Turn off the router and let it shut down for a couple of minutes before turning it back on. Connect the power cord back to PlayStation 3 and turn it on the way you normally do. Solution 2: Changing time settings on PlayStation 3Wrong time and setting dates are quite good reasons for not being able to log in to PSN properly, and you should definitely check whether these settings are set up properly on the console and fortunately you can do it easily by following the instructions below: Turn on the PS3 and go to The Settings set-up. The time zone is the one that fits your location and switch the DST option to daylight saving time rather than Standard.If these settings have been configured like this on PS3, you can skip this solution and try some of the remaining ones. Solution 3: Changing the DNS settings Changing DNS address can really work wonders for your PS3 connection, and this is probably the best advice that anyone can give you when dealing with these types of error codes. It's important to be careful about the settings you're changing, as you may lose your internet connection if you change the wrong settings. Follow the instructions below to change the default dns server on PlayStation 3: Turn on ps3 and go to the settings of the network settings. until you get the IP address menu. If you choose Auto-Detection option on the next screen and continue the IP address menu. Make sure you set your settings as follows: Set up IP address: Automatic name DHCP Host: Don't set DNS settings: Manual Primary DNS: 8.8.8.8 Secondary DNS: 8.8.4.4 MTU: Automatic Proxy: Don't Use UPnP: Turn on connection testing and check if the error code appears. Solution 4: Try to log in from another PS3One because of the possible cause of this error becoming your friend or using another PS3 to log in to your account. This is due to confusion, which is sometimes created by errors and maintenance, which fools PSN that you logged in with the PS3, preventing you from logging in again. However, if you log in from another PS3, you'll be logged out of your own PS3, which should help clear up the confusion. Make sure you don't share your account credentials with someone you don't fully trust because you risk losing your games and/or your funds. Solution 5: Reset your Internet connection settingsSUpising network settings is the perfect solution if you've changed them in any way other than to solve this bug. Some users claim that this method worked even though they never changed anything, so it's really worth giving this a shot. Wired Connection: Connect the Ethernet cable to the PS3 console and immediately go to the settings of the Internet Settings. Depending on the network environment, additional settings may be required for PPPoE, proxy, or IP address. For more information about these settings, please contact your ISP or the instructions that came with the network device. Save your settings and check your connection to see if you've successfully connected. Also, check if the error code 8002A308 continues to appear. Wireless connection: Check that the settings for the hotspot have been completed. Make sure there's an internet access point connected to the Internet service next to PlayStation 3. Settings for the hotspot are usually set by PC. Make sure the Ethernet cable is not connected to the PS3 console. Connect the Ethernet cable to the PS3 console and immediately go to the settings of the Network Settings of the Internet Connection. Depending on the PS3 model to use, you may be able to auto. Choose this one using an access point that supports automatic tuning. If you follow the instructions on the screen, the necessary settings will be completed completed access points that you want to use. SSID is the identification name given to the hotspot. Make sure you're trying to connect to your own hotspot or the point you have access to on your list. Choose the type of security that is used for the network and enter security credentials. When you're done typing the encryption key and confirm the configuration of the network, you'll see a list of settings. Depending on the network environment, additional settings may be required for PPPoE, proxy, or IP address. For more information about these settings, please contact your ISP or the instructions that came with the network device. Save your settings and check your connection to see if you've successfully connected. Also, check if the error code 8002A308 continues to appear. Solution 6: Testing your Internet connection and reconnecting to the InternetIt's a simple solution has helped some people get rid of this annoying bug code. As simple as it may seem, it helps and it only takes a minute of your time to try it out. Go to the internet connection TestClick settings on it and wait until he finishes his business. After that, go to the set-up of the internet connection and turn it off for a couple of minutes before re-enabling it back. Check to see if the error code appears.
