Spiral buffet sofitel manila price

Almost every hotel has a buffet breakfast. But spiral buffet at the Sofitel Manila, is a buffet that takes the meaning of the buffet to the next level. When I was in Manila, staying at the Sofitel, my wife Ying and I were invited to eat at the Sunday Brunch buffet at their Spiral Restaurant. I haven't even been close to eating at all buffets in Asia, but so far it's the grandest buffet, in all senses the word grand that I've tried so far. Here's what we ate.... Let's talk about spiral buffet grandness Spiral Buffet Spiral Buffet grandness is an international buffet with severe French influence, mainly due to the fact that Sofitel is a French hotel brand, but there's also a wide Asian food presence as well. To get a sense of the grandness of the buffet, they have their organized 21 different dining ateliers – which in French are art workshop stations – and the buffet they translate into different food sections. The roast duck at the front of the dining area was a mirror listing all the different ateliers, from philippine food stations to Peking duck station to the cheese room. There's literally something for everyone, and something to satisfy your cravings no matter what you're hungry for. I spent a good 15 minutes walking through the buffet, just absolutely amazed at how much food was available, both variety and choice. As soon as we arrived at Spiral Buffet on Sunday for lunch, they sat at our table, which, although it was only Ying and I, we sat at a full sofa table at 6pm – so we dined in some serious comfort. If you like cheese, you could probably eat a price worth just cheese alone! Spiral Buffet prices There are several different prices, and the price can fluctuate based on holidays and promotions, but here are the typical prices for sunday lunch buffet: 4092 PHP per person with everything you can drink alcohol in 3378 PHP per person without alcohol It's not a cheap buffet, but quality and choice makes it worth it. Champagne was poured out right away as we sat down for another highlight of the meal at the buffet is a free flow of drinks (you can get a chance with drinks or without having to go). So as soon as we sat down, they poured us a glass of champagne to start. If you're willing to drink wine and champagne, it's worth paying a higher price for an all-you-can-drink pass at the buffet. Spiral Buffet's signature bread Before we made our first trip to the buffet, our host came over with a house basket of bread, which she said was Spiral's signature bread made with olive oil. Even the bread was delicious, completely crusty on the edges, and fluffy and warm on the inside. I just had a taste of bread knowing I was about to go deep into the buffet. Okay, let's start with the buffet... Nothing makes hungrier than fresh tuna The Cold Japanese station buffet was so big and so spacious that I really had no idea where to start. So I did the only sensible thing I started with the atelier that was closest to our table – japan's cold station. Placed behind Japan's cold station were a couple of sushi chefs, constantly making sushi and slicing sashimi. Enter your email and I will send you the best travel food content. There was also a whole tuna, cut and on display, and ready to consume one slice of sashimi at a time. Oysters from France at spiral brunch buffet at the Sofitel Only on the side of Japan's cold station, was a European cold station that included oysters flown fresh from France, as well as a selection of various colored caviar. Somehow I totally missed foie gras, maybe I was mesmerized at the food I did see and looked over it, but foie gras (from what Anton showed) is available as well – all you can eat from it. First plate food spiral buffet manila so I started off with a selection of sushi and sashimi and some oysters and crab as well. Sushi was all pretty good, and the sashimi was fresh. Fresh oysters are hard to beat But the real plate winner was fresh oysters. They were quite large in size, very fresh, and just melted like a lump of jelly in my mouth. The crab, which I think was some kind of deep water crab, was also really good. It was meaty and fresh. Caviar Station Moving to caviar station. To be honest I don't really know what I'm doing when it comes to eating caviar and the right method of eating it – all I know is that I like it. I took a combination of both green and black caviar, both of which came from lumpfish. Caviar at the Sofitel Philippine Plaza Since I did not ned any of the side toppings and garnishes on the buffet line, I ate it along with a piece of crusty signature olive bread. It was excellent, nice and salty, like little beads of fish juice and oil. There was a good Filipino food choice as well as a Filipino food station while Spiral Buffet is an international buffet, I'm always interested in eating as much local food in the country as I can when I travel. So I was quite glad to see a nice selection of Filipino food. They not only have your typical pork adobo, but they were an interesting line-up dish to try. Crocodile adobo was the highlight there were a couple of Filipino dishes that really caught my attention, one of them was crocodile adobo, and the other was a dish of chopped stingray cooked coconut milk. They also had a steaming basket of balut, fertilized eggs as well. Filipino food course at Sofitel I had a nice choice of Filipino dishes, and no matter how badly I wanted a plate of rice to go with it and how good it would have tasted, I had to sacrifice the rice so that it could be eaten I've had a crocodile quite a few times and everyone is a part of it to taste a bit different, and oftentimes it's a bit rubbery. This crocodile here was very soft and gentle, like a cross between pork and fish, and really fragrant with adobo spices. Stingray was also very good, soft, like chopped chicken, and within a rich coconut milk sauce. Balut at the buffet you don't need to feel obliged to eat balut when you eat a spiral buffet, but if you're interested in giving it a try, they have it available. When I was in the Philippines a few years ago I enjoyed eating balut sometimes as an afternoon snack, so I was happy to have it again, this time at a fancy hotel buffet. If you have a few minutes, you can watch the full video to see me devour it! You know how hard-boiled eggs have more eggy flavor than an omelette or fried egg? If you take that egg flavor, and multiply it several times, and then add some extra textures, you'll have to balut. That's pretty good. The Indian food atelier Indian food course I'm a huge lover of Indian food, and there was no way I was going to miss the Indian station. Unable to beat dal makhani at Spiral Buffet they had various Indian curries as well as a full tandoor section where chefs were making things like tandoori shrimp and fresh naan. Overall Indian food was pretty good and I am a particular lover of dal makhani. Tanori shrimp was also excellent along with my Indian food plate, I added a couple of slices of prime ribs to my plate for good measure. French food station Sofitel French station Walking around the tour with the driver at the beginning, he explained to me that French cuisine often includes a kitchen, then a hot metal counter, which is usually the place where the waiter or waitress picks up the order and then delivers food to customers. The concept at Spiral Buffet was to eliminate as best as possible a step between the waiter and the customer, and only serve food from the chef's clients. In my opinion, the French section was one of the most impressive displays in the buffet because of its giant metal cooking station. Again, as in the entire buffet, the food was cooked freshly in small portions, then left to rest on the heated metal counter. The whole French section felt like you dressed up in a French restaurant kitchen, and just grabbed yourself food. French food and pizza Along with a couple of slices of pizza, I got a scoop of mashed potatoes, asparagus and carrots, white button mushrooms sautéed in butter, and a highlight of the plate, mussels simmered in cream and maybe some cheese and white wine. Those mushrooms! The mushrooms and mussels, both of which were heavy on butter, were awesome. The room was quite small and the bathroom was quite small. I just threw those slices on my plate as it was for a while I had pizza. Since I had also eaten at the Spiral buffet for breakfast the day before and was enjoying a plate of cheese from spiral cheese room, I didn't have this time at the buffet. But if you're in the mood for some good quality cheese, you could eat enough cheese to knock yourself out in this buffet. The flow of free champagne and wine I must admit, this time I wanted me to be back in my early 20s when I seemed to be able to eat non-stop and never get it completely. But unfortunately, in my later 20's I've started to slow down and can no longer eat almost as much as I used to be. Fortunately, since I had the whole couch to myself, I set back and relaxed for a few minutes before moving on to the next plate. Japanese sukiyaki Japanese hot station I went over to a Japanese hot station and I got a bowl sukiyaki. I couldn't resist some kimchi either, I then went around the buffet looking a little lost and full for a few minutes before deciding to grab a few more pieces of sashimi, some kimchi, and the final oyster to top things off. Good chocolate ice cream, and plenty of desserts Desserts Perhaps one of the other grandest part of the Sofitel buffet is desserts choice, something you'd expect from a French company. There was an entire chocolate production, including fountains of chocolate, and dessert choices to satisfy the most hardcore sweet teeth. There were cakes, candies, eclairs, pasta, chocolate, and even a selection of baby candies such as gummy worms. You might be disappointed when I say I skipped dessert... but I did. I'm not really sweets – even the ice cream pictured above was for my wife, which I had a taste of, and it was really good. But if you like sweets, I don't think there's anyway you'll be disappointed with desserts at the Spiral Brunch buffet. Cabinets full of chocolate Ying and I, both full of edges and satisfied, decided to call it a day buffet. On Sundays, the buffet was opened at 12:00 and closed at 14:00, and we arrived immediately after the opening and left just before closing. It was a well spent 3 hours of life. Spiral Buffet, Sofitel Philippine Plaza Manila, Philippines What I liked about Spiral Buffet Spiral Buffet has a lot going on, and after feasting there, here are some of the things I really liked and think they're really good: Cooking in small portions – One of the main reasons the buffet can be bad is because food is often prepared in big batches, and then just sits until it ends. At Spiral Buffet however, I noticed that the food was prepared in small batches, so it could sit less time before it ceases to make a new batch. Selection and assortment – Like I've already said a couple of times, I don't think I've ever been to a buffet with so many selections of food, ever. The food was mainly French and different Asian. Service - the service was excellent, and from reading other reviews on the buffet, it seems that others had as good a service as I did. The room was quite small and the bathroom was quite small. I couldn't do anything for the rest of the day, but to relax the conclusion at the popular Sofitel Philippine Plaza Manila* along the bay, Spiral Buffet is one of the grandest buffets I've ever been to Asia. When we were in Manila, Ying and I were staying at the Sofitel for a few nights, and they invited us to eat at sunday brunch buffet, including a free stream of champagne and wine, and all the food we could ever want in one meal. What I liked most is that, unlike many other buffets that cook in large portions and let the food sit until finished, at spiral buffet they cooked in a small portion so the food remained fresh and the flavors were preserved. Also, the choice and variety was unbelievable. I'm just glad Ying and I had room at the Sofitel because after eating at the buffet there's no way I could have moved to go anywhere. If you're in Manila and looking for one of the most extensive and high quality buffets in Asia, Spiral Buffet lunch on Sunday is a real treat. Spiral Buffet, Sofitel Philippine Plaza, Manila Address: CCP Complex Roxas Boulevard, Pasay City, Manila, 1300, Philippines Phone Number and Contacts: (+632) 551-5555 and [email protected] (reservations for Sunday lunch recommended) Website: and Prices: 4,092 PHP per person with alcohol, 3,378 PHP per person without alcohol How to get there: Sofitel Philippine Plaza is located in Manila Bay, near the Asian Mall. Perhaps the easiest way to get there is to jump into a city taxi or Uber. Disclosure: Ying and I were invited to eat at Sofitel's Spiral Buffet, so we didn't have to pay for our meal, and I just showed up to eat! However, all photos, videos and words are me. Same.
