Klimt tree of life art project

Gustav Klimt, an Austrian artist, created a Tree of Life painting in the early 1900s. He was interested in the quality of decorative art, as many artists before him still made very dark and conservative work. He helped start a group called Vienna Secession, who was a rebelling artist against the old way, and wanted new ideas for the turn of the century. MATERIALS *The above product links are references. Keep Using tissue paper, glue, and black-and-white temperamental paint, students will make mixed media art inspired by Gustav Klimt Life Tree by: Mrs Brown of the MrsBrownArt.com What You Need: 12 x 18 white paper (paper posters) tissue paper in warm color of the paint tempera (black, White, chocolate) paintbrushes of water containers and water glue, old paintbrushes and old yogurt containers What You Do: Day 1: Talk about Klimt (see information below). Show pictures of Klimt paintings, Tree of Life. (See Background Section below). Talk about the Tree of Life symbol and what it represents. Have children tear sheets tissue paper into smaller pieces. Then, encourage them to white paper sheets with tissue paper. Thinly layer brush the glue over the poster board. You may need to add some water to the glue makes it a runnier. Place one part of the tissue paper down at a time. Brush over each with glue and water. When filled, let the press dry. Day 2: Have students paint Y form in the middle of their tissue paper collage (using tempera paint). They can then add swirls to the ends of Y. Encourage them to see Klimt's original paintings and then add more swirls to their trees. The roots can be painted next. Finally, white and brown paint can be added to decorate the symbols of the tree. Background: Gustav Klimt paints a Life Tree which is an important symbol in almost every culture. The Tree of Life represents wisdom, protection, strength, and beauty. It gets to the sky and gets down to earth. It connects Heaven, Earth, and Underworld. Swirling branches make people want to keep looking at drawings to explore and find more. Even with mixed patterns and swirling branches we will still always recognize it as a Tree of Life. Gustav KlimtTree of LifeOil on the canvas, 1909Location: Museum of Applied Arts, Vienna, Austrian Notes from KinderArt: SOME of Gustav Klimt's works may not be suitable for young children. Make sure you research any images in the book and so on before introducing them to children. We have chosen a very suitable image for children and listed them below. About Gustav Klimt Gustav Klimt was an Austrian painter (born in 1862, died in 1918) and the founder of a painting school known as Vienna Sezession. Klimt's initial work was quite realistic. Most of the paintings he did before 1898 were large murals commissioned by the theatre. Later in his life, Klimt began drawing in a more innovative and imagia way until eventually his creation was very decorative and quite symbolic - meaning that many of the images in his work had hidden meanings. His most famous work is The Kiss. The following Image Supplementary Resources are ideal for young children: The Achievements of L'Albero Della Vita Tree Life You May Also Like: Building a Klimt, Step by Step Visiting Mrs Brown Art in mrsbrownart.com Every year we have a tradition of making thanksgiving trees. Sometimes I draw an outline of trees on butcher paper, and the kids write things they are grateful for on their leaves and tapes. Once we make the sculpture tree. We also use real leaves one year. The main idea of this project is to reflect all things - big and small - that we are grateful, and produce an art piece that shows our gratitude. This year we put a new twist on this family tradition. We combine learning about Klimt Gustav Tree paintings with activities our annual gratitude. I have can be printed in the Learning Library so you can create your own version at home! Take a look at Gustav Klimt's paintings, The Tree of Life. Ask your children to explain what they see, what they think, how make them feel, and what reminds them. Invite them to design their own trees, or use the template here. Once the background is done, they can fill swirls with all the different things they are grateful for. We do it as a family, but it will also be fun for every child to make their own. This year my kids are grateful for things like friends, family, tea parties, balls, origami, cats, balls, and dancing! I like to do different versions of the same activity every year, and look back to see how things they are grateful for changing as they get older. How do your kids like this activity? Let's join our Facebook and share a picture of their work! GUSTAV KLIMT ART PROJECT CHOICE ONE: LIVE PAINTING TREES Despite the detailed elegance of the Tree of Life Gustav Klimt painting, this fast and soothing art lesson can be completed in less than an hour. You need metal paint for this project. I use Sargent Metallic Tempera paint but other brands work too. There is a quality for metal paint that makes glide paint on paper. It's quite lovely and the kids enjoy the process. Start by drawing a tree trunk. Some children will have a tendency to pull the dick quite straight, so be sure to show them how to paint the trunk in liquid motion by drawing the opposite side to the straight line drawing. Extend the branches from the center and use the swirls at the end of each branch. Use some white temperament paint (I ignored to add that supply to the list!) and paint over gold paint. Let these areas dry completely and then children can draw on these white spots with black paint to make patterns or designs. Some of my students used oil pastels to add designs that I thought were a good addition. The final step is to use black paint to outline all the tree branches. I think this makes a piece. Some children hesitate to use black paint and brush, so it may be a better option for them to use thick black markers. Keep the gold paint dry before adding a marker or you'll spoil your marker. This lesson is the best way for children to use their own creativity and style to create a piece of art of all their own art. Klimt's example is beautiful but what's better is to see how children use the piece as inspiration. Try not to give too many instructions while drawing a tree. There is no wrong way and the child may surprise you with their interpretation. Live Drawing Tree Grade ... Here are notes that can help your students with drawings. OPTION TWO: INSPIRED KLIMT WOMEN Sometimes inspiration comes in many forms. I was diffusing one of the many art supply catalogues going on my desk and I saw metal paint for sale. Gold, bronze, copper, silver ... rich, color shows. I immediately thought of Gustav Klimt. I took a copy of the copy Klimt and His Cats by Berenice Capatti. The story was fantastic but it was an illustration by Octavia Monaco that drew me and had me drifting art lessons for my sixth grader. I think this would be the perfect opportunity to incorporate my old profession as a fashion designer, into my new one, an art teacher! I have a wide variety of collage material in hand ... sequins, buttons, scraps of cloth, and now paint the metal. I photocopy some illustrations from the book to serve as an inspiration, but challenge the kids to come up with their own Klimt women. We're talking about how Klimt is interesting in style; a small head on a long, sleek (and often dissolved) neck. I was in heaven. It's fun watching children draw in such proportions; small heads with large bodies, but they do it. After our first session of our Gustav Klimt art project, most children were able to pull the figure with a pencil (small head, clothes flowing from the yard, hair swept to the side) the colors in them with oil pastels and decorate with collage material (buttons, fabrics, etc.) For the second session of our Gustav Klimt art project, we continue to decorate the clothes with geometric designs, focusing on our layers of patterns. We added faces with coloured pencils, although some children left their faces empty. Hmmm. Background Using watercolor paper, we aggravate two cable pastels (using rich earth tone colors) across the surface. The child is careful not to choose the colour opposite the wheels of color less they get mud. Then, using glue bottles mixed with white glue and metal paint, we created designs in swirly curlicues, geometric patterns, etc. After dry paint and set slightly, students cut their women and sticky to watercolor paper. Many students do not end their faces but we are all happy with the results and processes. Gustav Klimt Art Project Gallery ARE YOU SPARKLER? More than 300 art lessons are available in Member Clubs.
