64 115 departures on the North Campus In recent months, apartment development after apartment development betrayed news near the University of St. Louis. Now, the school looks set to begin in spring 2015 in a phased development that will eventually add 1,350 beds to campus, according to a story today on UNews. Phase I is planned as an entirely new residential complex occupying vacant land east of Beracha Hall in Laclede and Spring Avenues. The residence is scheduled to be inaugurated for the 2016-2017 school year. The building adjacent to Beracha Hall is planned to reach eight floors and house 450 students. Griesedieck's expansion (pictured above – image via The University News) would count 450, or a total of 900 beds. The university announced earlier this month that it was committed to an extensive student housing project. This is the first rendering to appear and shows the planned addition to Griesedieck Hall. This expansion is expected to open for the year 2017-2018, followed by a complete renovation of the remainder of the griesedieck complex. The school has plans beyond the two phases announced, including the renovation of Reinert and Fusz, and new buildings next to a renovated Grand Forest complex. Brailsford & Dunleavy of Washington D.C. produced the student housing master plan, alongside St. Louis-based KWK Architects. McCarthy is taking care of preconstruction and construction. According to the university, just over 40% of the school's 8,800 students live on campus. It is expected to rise to more than 50% after the first phases of the project.
