Final fantasy 14 fashion report week 67

Glamour is the end of the game, it is a common joke among FFXIV players. So while we got a new Glamour Dresser (Commode) this patch, we also got a new mini-game at the Golden Saucer called Fashion Report! So once you unlock the new mini-game through a very short search on the Golden Saucer, you can talk to Masked Rose to see what this week's fashion requirements are (you can also see this from your Timers menu). You get a small mannequin vacuum that shows you the general theme, what items you're being judged on, and a hint as to what the right items are going to place in those grooves. This week's challenge is. That's all you have to go on. Now, some tips we've discovered: You need to have a piece of the tool in all the slots, even the ones that don't have tips. If you don't, your score will be significantly lower. No matter what's in those sockets, just that there's something there. Different pieces of glamour have different ratings - from 1 to 5 stars. Each item also has a certain amount of points attached to it, depending on how well it fits the hint. Not all 5 star glamour is given the same amount of points! Dye themes With a new update, correct dyes still give points, but it's no longer a requirement to reach 100 There's a thread on Reddit where folks are mulling over the hidden point system, so I'd point you there to see what we've figured out so far. So, once you've got your glamour ready, go back and talk to The Masked Rose. It only judges from Friday to reset on Tuesday. You have 4 opportunities to do it right every week. You get an automatic 10K MGP award for participation. But you can get more if you rate over an 80. I got another 40K to achieve over 80 points last week. This can be hard! For example, the ring with the friend hint at the end showed any ring dropped from the Vault. Because Haursehad. Yes. He's really so picky. It seems that FFXIV Reddit is working together to talk about what works and what doesn't. But rest assured that any glamour pieces that can be purchased are sold out on Friday, and are extremely expensive all weekend. So try to assemble your charm pieces already in the week as you can. Here's a video showing this in action: In addition to the MGP, there's a boutique vendor, Kasumi, next to Masked Rose that sells unique items, including emottes, housing, glamour and paint. The patch notes show that as long as participate in the Fashion Fair, the more items will open to buy. Overall, it's a fun little game for the community to take part in. It certainly helps to make some glamour items more popular, if only for a while. Just don't spend too much on it! You can see a list of supported browsers in the Help Center. Help Center This week is a particularly prospering opportunity for Final Fantasy 14 Fashion Report. It's the last weekend where you can buy the Final Fantasy 15 event rewards for FF14: including a fancy flying car, a nice new haircut, and a powerful Triple Triad card. The Regalia mount is particularly expensive, at 200,000 MGP. And since the FF14 Fashion Report is such a stellar source of special currency, procrastinating players are sure to want the input while they can get it. Unfortunately, the easy 80 - the Fashion Fair rating that provides the maximum reward for minimal effort - isn't that easy this week. Young players, at least, are in for a particularly embarrassing moment ... Considering that veterans (especially players who have enrolled in FF14 for five months or more) will a much easier go than things! Let's get into the details. He may also like it: Final Fantasy 14 doesn't make any bones to make his players look good. Fashion is such an important aspect of the game, in fact, that developer Square Enix introduced the FF14 Fashion Report. This weekly challenge allows players to play dress-up for amazing prizes. Well, more specifically the challenge awards huge amounts of MGP (a special currency used in Manderville Gold Saucer) that can be exchanged for prizes. You just have to earn the ever-elusive easy 80 points at the fashion show wearing the right clothes every weekend. Special thanks to the insurmountable r/kaiyoko for gathering much of this data on the Final Fantasy 14 subreddit every week. FF14 Fashion Report Rating – Basically As always, you want to have at least one random piece of tool equipped in every slot in your character. This will earn you at least 68 Fashion Report points for no work at all! It also doesn't include soul crystals, so don't worry about whatever job you've equipped. From there, you can increase your score by matching the categories set by the Fashion Fair judge, as well as adding some dyes. Match the right category of clothing with the weekly theme worth anywhere from 6-10 points. The correct color of the dye (e.g. gray, white, black, etc.) is worth a bonus point per slot, while finding the right shade of dye (e.g. Ice Blue, Chocolate Brown, etc.) is worth two points per slot. Using pigment to boost your Fashion Report score is usually easier than matching each category of item perfectly. This is because most dyes are terribly cheap and accessible, while most pieces of clothing are expensive - or else require high classes in manufacturing jobs to create. This is not always the case, of course, since some dyes are only available for special coins or for real money from Mog station. FF14 Fashion Report: Easy 80 Points for the weekend of May 24, 2019 Longtime players have been easy this week. Your best bet is to buy two cans of pigment - any combination of a blue ice, a grey ash, or a brown chocolate - from any dyemonger. These NPCs are located in the commercial areas of all three major cities: Limsa Lominsa, Ul'Dah, and Gridania. And you can pick up the two paint cans for a few hundred gil each. From there, you need to paint whatever headgear you have equipped with Chocolate Brown. Put Ash Grey Dye on your gun. Then apply the Ice Blue Dye to a pair of tantalus pants. These pants are only available as a 150-day subscriber fee. So if you've been playing for some time, chances are you already have them! If you do, and apply the right dyes to the right sockets, you're good to go! This is your easy 80 points for the FF14 fashion show this week. Unfortunately, not every player will have a pair of Vraka. And this is where things get tough: You will need one of the following clothing for one of the following character slots: Head - Bandanna Explorer, Cap Expeditioner, Ironworks Cap of Gathering, Carbonweave Cap of Gathering, Body - Sailor Shirt, Shirt of Divine Light, every Sacred Rainbow Shirt of ... category shirt. Feet - Every Sky Pirate's ... class pants, Tantalus pants. Feet - Any footwear acquired by Arboretum Saint Mocianne and/or Lighthouse Sirius (Hard). If you have any of these, or manage to obtain one, you can fill out the rest of your outfit using two or more correct dyes. The dyes for this week's FF14 fashion show are: Gun - Ash Grey (Dyemongers) Head - Chocolate Brown (Dyemongers) Body - Pure White (Calamity Salvager or Real Money Market) Feet - Ice Blue (Dyemongers) Feet - Jet Black (Calamity Salvager or Real Money Market) FF14 Fashion Report Tips for This Week First and Foremost, at least on my server, the Sailor Shirt is not worth your money or problem. Go for a cool 200,000+ gil on Cactus. I've even seen reports that craft materials cost more than the finished product in some cases. Oh, yes, yes, yes, yes, Sky Pirate pants are a damn sight cheaper: between 20K and 80K, depending on your class. And keep in mind that you don't have to spend extra on the most expensive high quality versions! The actual statistics of the data have no effect on the fashion fair. Carbonweave Cap of Gathering is also very cheap from where I am, but it locks you in playing a Student of the Earth. This could make filling your accessories slots a difficult proposition if you haven't gone too far in one of these jobs. Dungeon boots are not a terrible choice. Endgame players can solo the Sirius Lighthouse (Hard) and Saint Mocianne's Arboretum with ease, without timing, for increased chances of finding the right shoes. Boots fall even from the first boss in both dungeons. So you can beat the first baddie, check the chest, and reboot if you don't get what you need. Of course that doesn't really help low-level players... The Ex-President's hat is hard. It's technically one of the cheapest options in the bunch, but requires a Bronze Trip Spoil instead of standard cash. This requires you to be in a free company with an airship that actually runs exploratory trips. Mileage can vary. And take it! This should put you on the right track for the FF14 fashion show this week. Be sure to check-in on the Friday for another update and instructions on how to rear your 80,000 MGP. Until then, good luck and have fun out there, adventurers! Adventurers! Adventurers!
