[1] The film stars Paul Petersen, Quinn O'Hara, Charla Doherty, Neil Fletcher and Hugh Feagin. AIP commissioned low-budget cult film author Larry Buchanan to produce and direct the film as a color remake of Roger Corman's 1955 film World's Day. [2] Although it was not set in 2889, the title is borrowed from a short story of the same title by Jules Verne and his son, Michael Verne. [3] [4] Fence Nuclear War wiped out the majority of the earth's population. The film follows a group of survivors who are holed up in a remote valley and must protect themselves from rising radiation levels, mutants and, in some cases, each other. [5] Casting Paul Petersen as Steve Quinn O'Hara as Jada Charla Doherty as Joanna Ramsey Neil Fletcher as Captain John Ramsey Hugh Feagin as Mickey Brown Max W. Anderson as Granger Bill Thurman as Tim Henderson Byron Lord as Mutant Production AIP Buchanan gave the screenplay of the 1955 Corman film World Day ended up being used for this film, resulting in an almost line-up , a remake of the scene for the scene. [quote required] This was Buchanan's fifth Azalea Productions movie. [quote required] It was made by AIP six years after the success of their 1961 Jules Verne adaptation of Master of the World. [quote required] Since this was an even lower budget remake of the earlier low budget Corman film, it needed a new title; AIP already had a registered title available (for the previously unnn produced Verne project), so it was used on the Buchanan film. Gaita concluded his review by writing: 'No one can get it right with a classic of the genre, or even one of Corman's titles, but for Buchanan completists and late film devotees, it's a harmless and enjoyable time killer.
