It seems to me that just yesterday the 2019/20 Premier League season got tangled up, but we are already in a busy December period of the 2020/21 season. We have full details on how to live stream Premier League games online this season no matter where you are in the world. Source: Premier League After an unusual end to last season after a break forced by a pandemic, Liverpool managed to keep their nerves at bay to lift their first English trophy in 30 years. Arsenal then went on to beat Chelsea in the FA Cup final by the end of England's domestic season on August 1. Bournemouth, Watford and Norwich City were relegated last season and have been replaced by Fulham, Leeds United, and West Bromwich Albion for this season. As in La Liga, the 2020/21 Premier League season kicked off on 12 September, about five weeks later than usual. This is both because of the previous season being played to finish until July, just as Europa League and Champions League football was postponed until August. This means that Premier League sides have had a much shortened pre-season with just a matter of weeks between the competitive matches they have wrapped up and the new wave of games starting, especially those involved in European competitions. Read on for details on how to get a live stream of the 2020/21 Premier League season online with our guide below. Watch the Premier League online from outside your country We have details of all American, British, Australian and Canadian Premier League broadcasters further in this guide. If you're looking to watch the event but find yourself away from home, then you'll run into trouble when trying to stream your home coverage online from abroad because it's likely to be geo-blocked. This is where the VPN (Virtual Private Network) can be lifesaver. They allow you to virtually change the ISP of your laptop, tablet or mobile phone to one that is back in your home country, allowing you to watch as if you were there. Here are some alternatives that are on sale right now. No matter where in the world you may be, VPN is one of the easiest ways to watch the Premier League. Go to this deal now! As it stands, no fans will be able to attend Premier League matches for the foreseeable future as England continue to struggle with Pandemic. That doesn't mean you have to lose the action, though, with games aired every week. In fact, as at the end of last season, all Premier League matches will be broadcast or available as individual pay-per-view games until fans can return to stadiums with the traditional Saturday 3pm TV blackout being cancelled. Most matches will be split between the league's three main broadcast partners in the UK: Sky, BT and Amazon Prime. Unlike the end of last season, games are not free-to-air and the Premier League has instead decided to charge a £15 pay-per-view fee to watch all games that are not broadcast online. If you don't have Sky Sports and BT Sport channels as part of your TV package, you can subscribe now to TV offering day and month passes to Sky Sports and BT Sport is offering a monthly pass for £25 which allows you to stream events from your channels through the BT Sport app. Amazon Prime subscriptions give you access to Prime Video for your games. In addition to domestic seasons such as the Premier League getting back in full swing, one tournament also underway is the Uefa Nations League with 55 national teams from across Europe competing in the group stage 2020/21. Now these group stage matches have come to an end, we now know which teams have progressed to the 2021 finals and which countries have progressed to the next group stage. We have all the details below as well as information on how to live stream UEFA Nations League 2020/21 games online no matter where you are in the world. Source: UEFA The global pandemic has suspended most domestic seasons across Europe, leading to a delay in the end of the campaign. This delay is also postponed to the planned Euro 2020 competition next summer. If you were excited to see some international football, the Uefa Nations League has you covered. Portugal became the winner of the 2018/2019 UEFA Europa League opening tournament and had hoped to defend the title this season, although they failed to escape the group. Read on for details on how to get live coverage of the UEFA Nations League 2020/21 season no matter where you are in the world with our guide below. How does the UEFA Nations League 2020/21 work? The UEFA League of Nations is a two-year competition that sees UEFA's 55 national teams face off in group-style competitions. Although its format is somewhat confusing, it aims to replace international friendly games on the calendar with more competitive games. It also gives teams a chance to fight it out for some silverware. The format has been slightly rejigged for the 2020/21 edition of the competition, which now sees 55 UEFA national teams divided into four leagues. Leagues A, B and C have 16 teams divided into four groups of four teams. League D contains seven teams divided into two groups, one containing four teams and the other three. League placings were ranked based on performance in the 2018/19 competition. Promotion and relegation is possible among all leagues, which will give all teams something to play for, and the winners of the four A-League groups will progress to the knockout stages for the League of Nations trophy itself. Given that there are four groups in League C and only two in League D, the relegation play-offs decide which two sides drop out of the league. World Cup qualification is also in play with the two best performing League of Nations teams (who did not qualify for the World Cup or play-offs through regular qualifying matches) to the 12-team World Cup play-offs in March 2022, along with 10 runners from the 10 World Cup qualifying groups in Europe. Three teams from these play-offs will gain entry to the World Cup. When does the UEFA Nations League 2020/21 start? The first harvest of matches in the UEFA League of Nations 2020/21 took place in early September 2020, with teams competing twice. The second set of the group stage game took place from Saturday October 11, 2020, with games continuing until Wednesday October 14. The last group stage matches were played in November 2020, the final was held in October 2021. The League C relegation play-off will take place in March 2022 to decide who will drop into League D before the next iteration of the League of Nations competition. When are the 2020/21 League of Nations finals and which teams have qualified? The date of the UEFA Europa League 2020/21 final has now been confirmed. The semi-finals will be played on 6 and 7 October 2021, with the final and play-offs for third place to follow on October 10. The four teams that have outnumbered in the A-group of the League of Nations and will compete for the League of Nations trophy are Italy, Belgium, France and Spain. Who came down in the group stage of the UEFA Europa League 2020/21? Bosnia and Herzegovina, Iceland, Sweden and Switzerland were this time the four countries reeled from League A and will be replaced in 2022 by the B-group winners Austria, the Czech Republic, Hungary and Wales. Northern Ireland, Slovakia, Turkey and Bulgaria have relegated from League B and will drop out of League C in the course of this tournament. Bottom League C sides Cyprus, Estonia, Moldova and Kazakhstan will face off in a two-legged relegation play-out to decide which two sides will drop into League D for 2022/23. The two losers of these play-outs will exchange places with the Faroe Islands and Gibraltar in League D.
