Curly hair anime girl

You know, this article was harder than expected. You'd think that considering how curly girls exist in real life, this anime would be full of them! But strangely not. Most animes seem to have straight hair – maybe it's something to do with curly hair being a bit unusual in Japan. For this reason, most of the girls on this list are from abroad – or as much abroad as the anime will allow. Anime America, Europe and Britain – where nothing is authentic, but everything (including curly-haired girls) are beautiful. 15. Emporio Ivankov Anime: One Piece I get it. It's a strange first choice. If you could consider Ivankov a girl is questionable. But being an Okama, they spent time in both sexes – and that's amazing. Not to mention iva's hair curls are on point. Using the Horn-Horn Fruit, Ivankov has the power to change gender at will and even use it against his enemies (which probably ends up putting them in therapy). In fact, we see the Queen of Okama in her feminine form, which is hot and an incredibly flexible fighter full of courage. Not the cutest girl on the list (sorry), but any chance of including a rocky horror reference is an opportunity I can't ignore. Anime: One Piece Keeping this theme we have Sadi, the empress of Impel Down who is the high security prison that our heroes are trapped inside. Preferring to be called 'Little Sadi' despite definitely not being 'small' at all, Sadi is a sadistic dominatrix who has fun with pain and torture. Your favorite weapons as exactly what you would expect - a fork and a whip. Fortunately, we also have another curly-haired buxom dominatrix on the team – Ivankof. In fact, the moment we see Ivankof transform into his female form is just to fight Sadi and take out Luffy and the gang. Two whips, two sadists, two curly girls – a fight. Anime: Valkyria Chronicles An important character in both the anime and the original video game series, Brigitte 'Rosie' Stark is a bar singer whose career is destroyed by war in Europe. Despite never having graduated from high school, she becomes a fearless soldier and quickly rises to cable status. Rough from a difficult past, she begins the series by questioning Welkin's command (she's been in the army much longer; why is a child in charge?) and racist against Welkin's older sister, Isara, a dark-haired Darcsen (a race of immigrants in Europe). However, as the story progresses, it grows considerably. Ultimately, putting aside his prejudice and becoming fiercely loyal to his friends, no matter his race. Anime: Kaleido Star Sarah Dupont is the lead singer and dorm manager of Kaleido Star, the world-class that everyone in the show performs. Originally from the UK, Sarah has long wavy hair and performs in a giant Cinderella outfit. But don't let her be ready. Ready. deceive you. She specializes in martial arts and keeps nunchucks literally up her sleeves. Having lived in Britain for many years, a little self-defense is more than necessary. And the first episode of Kaleido Star started with a robbery, so maybe Sarah has something going on there. Anime: Yu-Gi-Oh! Possibly the most famous character on this list, the beautiful and skilled Mai Valentine is one of the most recognizable characters of YuGi-Oh. Orphaned as a child, Mai grew up working in bars where she would trick men into pretending to have psychic powers and making them bet on their cards. Seriously, and this is a children's show too! This skill with cards transferred well to duels as she entered several competitions to become a great duelist. Although often victorious, Mai had very few friends before meeting Yugi and the gang. Although she betrayed them a few times along the way, Mai nevertheless became a trusted ally and friend. Anime: Dragon Ball Launch (literally 'Lunch' – I'm writing this in the morning and I'm hungry) is a lady with a rare disease that makes her change her personality every time she sneezes. Welcome to Japanese animation. In her normal form, she has curly blue hair and is an absolute angel. When she sneezes, her hair gets curled and blonder (somehow). In this form, she is violent, carefree, and always has a machine gun (somehow). Originally, Launch's two personalities were completely separate and did not keep a memory of each other. But for later parts of the series, she began to be able to control them. I wonder if ever having her nose itchy was her secret. Anime: Digimon Airu is an antagonist of Digimon Xros: The Young Hunters Who Traveled Through Time, a sequel to the Digimon Xros series that is just one of many slightly different spinoffs. A slightly bipolar and strong personality both at work and in the game, she pursues Digimon while making her passions – tirelessly. She also likes her men as she likes her Digimon – cute, or at least what she finds beautiful. She has the parasimon one-eyed spider and literally melting candleman like two of her main Digimon so... Driven only by the collection of cuteness, Airu doesn't care about the Third Rule of the Digimon Hunter Code 'Never take Digimon owned by another Hunter'. If she thinks her Digimon is beautiful, it's hers. Anime: Girls und Panzer In an alternate timeline where World War II-era tanks are kept for sporting purposes, high schools around the world send students to compete in traditional martial arts competitions sensha-do The Way of the Tank. And that's how we ended up with Girls und Panzer, a show about beautiful girls from school... and tanks. is part of the BC-Freedom High School team that operates Vichy France-era tanks. Based on several iterations of Marie-Antionette, she is balanced, graceful and always seen with cake – a reference to the phrase Let them eat cake!, which was (erroneously) attributed to the French princess. Anime: High School DxD Ravel Phenex is a demon with a huge fall by the protagonist Issei Hyoudo. Although young, Ravel is much smarter than other demons and able to deceive his opponents. Serving as the chief strategist for Issei's peerage, Ravel leads his team of demons to victory. However, it is not really the kind of hardened battle. She is the youngest of four Phenex brothers and it shows. She is a dread, tantrums, and always gets what she wants – lucky she wants what the hero wants! Anime: Hunter x Hunter Biscuit, preferring to be called Bisky, is a young, cute, little girl with long curly braids. Only she's not. She is actually a great 57 year old bodybuilder of a woman several times her normal size with pectorals the size of her entire body. But she prefers to stay young; Who wouldn't? A bad-betrayal in the heart and a high-experience hunter (she even led the exams), she uses her little form to trick enemies into underestimating her. Only to then revert to their real form and beat them all. Anime: Tokyo Ravens Suzuka Darienji 'The Prodigy' is one of the 'Twelve Divine Generals'. In the anime this is a group of the best Onmyouji in Japan – magical users. Nicknamed a prodigy for his intelligence though young, his talents came at a cost. Brutally experienced from a young age by her sadistic father to produce magical geniuses, she managed to... but his brother did not and died young. Maybe that's why she and her brother have curly blond hair... Suzuka later tries to revive her brother, but can only summon a ghost into his body. Death is death, even for magicians. Anime: Puella Magi Madoka Magica Mami Tomoe is an experienced magical girl from the stellar Puella Magi Madoka Magica, a dark vision of the magical trope that has been described as one of the greatest television series of the 21st century. Selfless but lonely, Mami fights only for justice. Which makes it difficult to join other magical girls who fight for understandable, though less charitable, reasons such as self-defense or gaining Seeds of Mourning to replace their own magic. At the beginning of the series, Mami admits her own difficult orphan education as part of the reason for her seclusion, telling Madoka that she cries often when she is alone. However, Mami is often seen as an affectionate figure teaching Madoka and Sayaka the ways of the magic girl – the exciting parts, and the scary parts – and also organizing tea parties. Tea parties make everyone feel better, don't you agree? Anime: The Black Butler Elizabeth Midford is the cousin of Ciel Phantomhive, hero of Black Butler and master of the true black butler, the demon Sebastian Michaelis. in Victorian London is not easy for a girl. You are taught to be weak and feminine so that men like you. There's not much power given to you as you're expected to hear the men in your life. Elizabeth, however, manages to play the game from the inside. yes, she likes femininity. She loves cute things and even decorated Ciel's room with ribbons, much to her dismay. But she keeps her intelligence hidden. She is very intelligent, cunning, loyal and easily able to dispatch any enemy with her twin double swords. Anime: Kill La Kill Harime Nui is a great villain from Kill La Kill. Its incredible cuteness is a façade that hides a much darker and more unbalanced behavior. Born completely synthetically from alien life fibers, Harime is one of the strongest characters in the series as well, improving almost every character in a one-on-one fight. Not only that, but she constantly breaks the fourth wall – the only character to do so. It relies on subtitles, interrupts the end credits and often causes chaos for both the rest of the cast and the audience. Only ryuko's shear blades are able to put a scratch on her. That is, if she can get to Harime. Anime: BanG Dream! Do I really dare put a high school drummer #1 above all hardcore fighting girls? Yes. I have a weakness for BanG Dream and Saaya in particular has an exciting character arc that a weeb and musician like me just can't help but faint anymore. Part of Bang Dream's first band, Poppin Party, Saaya only joined at the final critical moment when they were taking the stage without a drummer. Formerly part of CHiSPA, another girl band, Saaya dropped out after her mother suddenly fainted and went to the hospital. Feeling responsible for the family, she gave up performing to spend time at home taking care of everyone. However, she never stopped loving music and with the support of her family (and Kasumi's endless nuisance), Saaya returned to the stage with her beautiful curls (waves?) to do what she loves most. More.
