Copyright © 2020 InfoSpace Holdings, LLC, a System1 company Dolly Parton, with its history-making wig collection and passion for serious make-up, doesn't exactly have a reputation for being low-maintenance. But as the country legend reveals in her recent memoirs, she also knows how to roughen her when needed. Until I was a teenager, I used red stolberries for lipstick and a burnt matchstick for eyeliner, she says. I used goat leaf for perfume. Now I'm not over a little beauty improvisation. Although I've never lubricated berry juice on my face, I gave myself a Sharpie manicure at the time and am known for using natural ingredients from the pantry, such as avocado or pumpkin, for face masks. But from my experience, there is no real substitute for the well-made products we buy at the makeup counter. They have not only been tested to give us the best results but I feel more beautiful when it's well packaged – not in my yard. And apart from emergencies, it looks like Dolly feels the same these days. Yet you must love their will - and humility. That's right, the Queen of the Country sleeps with her makeup. During a Q&A with The New York Times, she gave this explanation for why she doesn't clean it until the morning. You never know if you're going to destroy the bus, you never know if you're going to be somewhere in a hotel and there's going to be a fire, Parton told the magazine in 2019. So I leave my makeup on at night and clean my face in the morning. Who inspired Parton's iconic look? RELATED: Dolly Parton 'Almost Had a Heart Attack' When She Heard Whitney Houston's 'I Will Always Love You' The country music superstar revealed that people in the industry have told her she'd probably gotten better in my career if I wasn't so cheap and whimsical Had. Today she is a style icon and has always felt comfortable with the look for which she became famous, which was actually inspired by a woman who was in the same she grew up. I thought she was absolutely beautiful, the singer recalled. She had these piles of bleached hair, red lipstick, nails and cheeks and high-heel shoes. Parton added that she never lets what others think be bothered. I'm not intimidated by how people perceive me, she said. Dolly Parton has 11 siblings, many of whom also work in show business. Here you will find each of them in 2019. After working in music and film for decades, there is no doubt. Dolly Parton and her siblings belong to a seriously gifted family. And since Dolly will be co-host of the 53rd Annual CMAs, we had even more reason than usual to think about the Partons and their incredible talent. So, what is the story with these 11 brothers and sisters, anyway? And where are the Parton siblings now? The large family, born Robert and Avie Lee Parton, grew up near the Smoky Mountains in Sevier County, Tennessee. The six boys and six girls were named Willadeene, David Wilburn, Coy Denver, Dolly Rebecca, Bobby Lee, Stella Mae, Cassie Nan, Randel Huston Randy, Larry Gerald, Estel Floyd and twins Freida Estelle and Rachel Ann. , who have always encouraged them to sing at home and in the Church. Singing was like breathing at home, Dolly's sister Rachel told People in 1982. Unfortunately, two of Dolly's brothers have died over the years. Larry Parton died just four days after his birth in 1955, as reported by the Fox News segment in 2015. And Floyd Parton, Dolly's brother and longtime songwriting partner, died in 2018 at the age of 61. Over the years, Floyd had written and played a number of songs for Dolly, including Rockin' Years from Heartbreaker's Eagle When She Flies, Nickels and Dimes and Waltz Me to Heaven from Strass. But the rest of the Parton kids are still there – and many of them still perform with Dolly. Here's what they're all doing now. Stella Parton Jo Hale Just like Dolly, 73, some of the Parton sisters immersed themselves in singing and acting. Stella Parton, 70, was one of them. She went in the footsteps of her older sister and made her country singing debut in 1967. In fact, you might remember her 1975 hit I Want to Hold You in My Dreams Tonight. More recently, Stella appeared in Dolly's TV movie Coat of Many Colors. Cassie Parton & Freida PartonCassie Parton, 68, and Freida Parton, 62, are also talented singers. Cassie appeared on the Dollywood show My People with her brother Randy in 2013, Knoxville News reported. Freida no longer attends the stage after appearing in a punk band in the 1980s and singing on some of Dolly's back-up albums; it now works as a He even opened her own wedding chapel in Sevierville, according to the Knoxville News Sentinel. No wonder: Dolly's brother Randy, 65, also watched music. In addition to performing with his band Moonlight Bandits, Randy also sang on the soundtrack of the 1984 film Rhinestone and performed with his sister Rachel in Dollywood's a cappella group Honey Creek. Rachel Parton Dennison Bruce Glikas / Getty Images Parton fans will also remember Dolly's famous younger sister Rachel Parton Dennison, 60, who starred in the ABC sitcom 9-5 from 1982 to 1988 and also sang in Honey Creek. In 2014, she performed with Dolly and Stella at the Red Tent Women's Conference in Tennessee, reminding us all why the Partons are such country legends. Willadeene PartonAlthough she did not pursue the entertainment industry like many of her siblings, the oldest Parton child, Willadeene Parton, 79, contributed to the family empire through books. In 1996, she wrote the Parton Family Memoir, Smoky Mountain Memories: Stories from the Hearts of the Parton Family, followed by her 1997 cookbook All-Day Singing & Dinner on the Ground. David Parton, Coy Parton and Robert Lee Partonfor Dolly's other siblings, David Parton, 77, Coy Parton, 76, and Robert Lee Parton Jr., 71, never watched show business and tend to keep their lives private.
