[3] The first five seasons of the series, in which Pinsky also serves as executive producer, cast celebrities struggling with addiction, with the first season premiering on January 10, 2008, and the fifth airing in 2011. The sixth season, which was filmed in early 2012,[4] featured non-celebrities as a treatment person, and the show's name shortened to Rehab with Dr. Drew. Season 6 premiered on May 16, 2013, Pinsky announced that season six was the final season, explaining that he had grown tired of the criticism directed at him after celebrities he treated had relapsed into addiction and died. [6] [7] Recurring voices The following are staff of the Pasadena Recovery Center (China), where the series is filmed. Throws for each season are seen in sections for these seasons. Dr. Drew Pinsky - Pinsky is the star of the show, and the lead specialist who treats patients. A board-certified internist and addiction medicine specialist, he rose to fame as host of the nationally syndicated radio talk show, Loveline. In addition to Celebrity Rehab, he also appears in his spinoffs, Sex Rehab with Dr. Drew and Sober House. [8] [9] [10] Shelly Sprague – The resident technician who runs the floor. [11] A recovering addict herself,[12] she has also appeared at Sex Rehab with Dr. Drew. She met Pinsky through Bob Forrest, a fellow recovering addict and colleague Drew's with whom Sprague used to do drugs. She runs a center at Las Encinas Hospital in Pasadena, California. [13] Pinsky notes that she becomes more personally involved with patients than other technicians like Loesha do. [14] Bob Forrest – Pinsky's chief advisor, who performs during group sessions. [15] [16] A rock musician the gangs Thelonious Monster and The Bicycle Thief and a recovering addict since 1996,[13][15] Forrest is the chemical addiction program director at Las Encinas Hospital, where he was hired by Pinsky. [15] Loesha Zeviar[17] – A resident technician who first appears in the second episode of Season 2. In response to observations that Loesha receives more abuse than Sprague, Pinsky describes her as more staid than Sprague. [14] Pinsky has referred to her as one of the most powerful employees in China. [18] Dr. Charles Sophy – psychiatrist and director of the Los Angeles County Department of Children and Family Services. He is also the author of Side By Side The Revolutionary Mother-Daughter Program for Conflict-Free Communication, and is the lead psychiatrist of the Celebrity Rehab and Sober House production team. Although he only appears occasionally, he was present throughout the filming of the second season of Sober House. [19] Sasha Kusina – Nurse at Pasadena Recovery Center. Although it is seen as early as season 2,[20] it is in Season 5 that her full name is revealed and she is seen talking to the other staff, regarding her report with patient Bai Ling, which Kusina convinces to take her prescribed psychiatric medication. [21] [22] Jennifer Gimenez - A model and actress and former addict who credits her recovery to Pinsky.[23][24] Gimenez was sober living house manager at Celebrity Rehab spinoff Sober House, and began working as a rehab technician at the Pasadena Recovery Center in Season 5 of Rehab. [25] Dr. John Sharp - Dr. Sharp is a board certified psychiatrist, best-selling author and media expert. He is part of the faculty of both Harvard Medical School and the David Geffen School of Medicine at UCLA, dividing his time between Boston and Los Angeles. He first appeared as a guard psychiatrist in season 5,[26][27] and serves in that role and as Associate Medical Director, Beginning with season 6. [26] [28] Simone Bienne - A relationship therapist who first appears in season 6. [29] Production According to a December 2009 article in The New York Times, Drew Pinsky, who was alarmed by the tabloid portrayal of addiction, addressed as an indulgence with the rich and famous , and a group of independent producers, join VH1 with a proposal for a reality TV series that would authentically portray addiction as a kind of media intervention. [30] According to executive producer John Irwin, casting for the first season was the hardest, as representatives of the celebrities who had been arrested or had published bouts of addiction refused to talk to him and the other producers. The process became easier after the first season aired. Actor Tom Sizemore, for example, who was cast for Season 3, had been in demand since season 1. [31] Producers have reportedly offered actress Lindsay Lohan six figures to on the show. [32] Pinsky, who focuses on the treatment side of the production, is not usually involved in casting,[33] although he reportedly visited Rachel Uchitel in person to convince her to participate in the fourth season's cast. [34] A host of cameras are employed, which film 24 hours a day, seven days a week, during the 21-day treatment cycle. Because some dramatic incidents occur early in the morning when camera crews are not present, automated cameras are mounted all over the clinic to capture them. The exception to this is the bathrooms, which are nonetheless equipped with microphones to monitor unusual sounds, such as patients trying to use drugs. In addition to receiving the free treatment (which would normally be worth approximately US$50,000-60,000), patients are paid a salary for their appearance on the series, which is proportionate, and distributed once a week as an incentive to stay. [13] Celebrity Rehab spun off two other shows. The first spinoff is Sober House, which portrays rehab alumni who live for 30 days at a sober living facility, as a temporary step to recover addicts between the end of rehab and their eventual return to their old lives. [35] The second spinoff is Sex Rehab with Dr. Drew, where Pinsky and his staff treat celebrities for sexual addiction. In May 2013, Pinsky announced that season six was the final season, citing the criticism directed at him after the relapse and death of cast members, saying: I'm tired of taking all the heat. It's very stressful and very intense for me. Having people question my motives and take aim at me because people get sick and die because they have a life-threatening illness and I take the blame? Rodney King has a heart attack, and I take the blame for that? It's just ridiculous. Pinsky insisted that his practice depicted on the show were the same ones he, Bob Forrest and Shelly Sprague engaged in for decades, with the only difference being the presence of cameras. Despite his decision not to continue the series, Pinsky declared a number of people achieved sobriety because of Celebrity Rehab who wouldn't have achieved it without the show, citing as the biggest success story Sizemore, who struggled with Pinsky's program for 10 years before finally achieving sobriety after being on the show. [6] [7] Reception While Pinsky and the series have won praise from both former addicts and other addiction specialists, many take issue with Pinsky's methods. Jeffrey Foote, a clinical psychologist and substance abuse expert, said: The velvet-glove confrontational thing Pinsky does is what works for TV, but that's not what works for patients. The website of Foote's Center for Motivation and Change uses a clip from Celebrity Rehab to demonstrate bad techniques. Foote added: confrontations seen on the show are actually more likely to drive less serious serious addicts, which are the vast majority, away from seeking treatment. Critics also argue that patients' needs and the show's needs constitute a conflict of interest, with Dr. John J. Mariani, director of the Substance Treatment and Research Service at Columbia University stating, The problem here is that Dr. Drew benefits from their participation, which must have some strong effects on his way of relating to them. He also has an interest in the outcome of their treatment is interesting to viewers, which is also not in their best interest. Dealing with conflicts of interest is not processing. [30] Pinsky has responded to such criticism by saying that his medical peers do not understand television. You have to work within the framework of what managers will allow you to put on TV. Otherwise we haven't done anything, we haven't really struggled to change the culture at all. As for the series airing on a network that broadcasts other reality shows featuring uncritical depictions of sexuality and alcohol as recurring themes, he said, The people who need what we've seen VH1. Not the people who watch educational TV, the NPR crowd. You have to give them what they want so you can give them what they need. [36] Defending the practice of paying addicts to attend rehab, producer John Irwin said: Whatever it takes to get them through the door so they can start treatment, that's the goal. [13] Pinsky offered a similar answer, saying: It's all bait and shift. Whatever motivates them to come in, that's fine. Then we can get them involved in the process. [36] Despite the involvement of former Alice in Chains bassist Mike Starr as well as an appearance by Nancy McCallum, the mother of original AIC singer Layne Staley, who died of an overdose in 2002, the remaining original members of AIC, guitarist Jerry Cantrell and drummer Sean Kinney, have criticized the show, calling it disgusting. [37] Kinney said of the program, It utilizes people at their lowest point when they're not in their right mind, and the sad part is, it's like entertainment for people when it's actually a life and death situation. I don't think it helps anyone and it makes entertainment out of people's possible death and it's pathetic and it's stupid. [38] In March 2009 columnist Drew Grant called for an end to the series because of its warped sense of priorities, believed that the practice of bringing together celebrities with serious substance abuse with others, according to Grant, either does not have addiction, or whose addiction is self-diagnosed, like Rachel Uchitel and Gary Bussey, in order to create entertainment, serves to promote celebrity narcissism , which Pinsky himself has criticized. [39] [40] Not all substance abuse specialists have been critical of the show. Dr Mary Oxford, staff psychologist for the Menninger Clinic, it to remove the stigma around addiction in the general public, and demystify the process of treatment.[41] and show lay people skills reflective listening. All three, as well as Laurer and Foxworth, would eventually relapse; some genebest as treatment. VH1 aired a reunion special describing patients' lives since filming. Although Conaway was able to maintain sobriety from alcohol and cocaine, he continued to abuse analgesics for his back pain, and would return for treatment in the show's second season. Binzer also appeared in several episodes of the second season for his relapse, as well as the Sober House spin-off series. Laurer was hospitalized in December 2008 and was reportedly going back to rehab. [45] She was later found dead in her house on 20 April 2004[46] Nielsen and Rodriguez have reportedly maintained their sobriety. Pinsky has said on several occasions that Nielsen has stopped drinking and also stopped smoking. [13] Nielsen has also appeared on his radio programs to talk about his sobriety. In 2009, she appeared as a panellist for another group at the Pasadena Recovery Center, where she anticipated the upcoming two-year mark of her sobriety, that July, as seen in a third season episode of the series, which aired in February 2010. [47] Sierra has been testing clean and sober for a year and a half after a year of court-ordered treatment at the Pasadena Recovery Center. [47] Sierra has tested clean and sober for a year and a half after a year of court-ordered treatment at the Pasadena Recovery Center. [47] She also appeared with Nielsen in the aforementioned third season episode, which marks her 18 months of sobriety. [47] The status of Baldwin's sobriety is unknown. In May 2009, Foxworth is reportedly sober and gave birth to a son. [49] Carey relapsed and returned to porn, where he starred in and directed a parody film called Celebrity Pornhab with Dr. Screw, a decision that Pinsky said saddened him. [recion needed] As for her sobriety, commented in a January 2010 TV Guide story, She puts puts six weeks at a time of sobriety, and then you drift away. We're trying to get her to keep doing this once and for all. [13] Season 2 Season 2 of Celebrity Rehab premiered on April 23, 2015. Pinsky saw musician Steven Adler as this season's problem child, describing his behavior as suicidal, and related that Adler had to be taken to a psychiatric hospital for two weeks before going into rehab. Jeff Conaway was also a serious concern, according to Pinsky. [33] Actor and recovering cocaine addict Gary Bussey enters the program, claiming to do so not as a patient but as a mentor to help others in their recoveries. This was stated in his contract, and confirmed by VH1's official press release on Season 2. [50] [51] Pinsky disputes this, however, stating, I was confused too. But that's not my problem. My problem is that I have a guy who needs help and I have to figure out a way to get him into treatment. Gary [ends up having] a really inspiring experience. But it'll be 10 days before he gets here. [51] Alcohol; ecstasy Vicodin; morphine; Fentanyl; cocaine heroin[52] October 1, 2008, rock band Alter Bridge, along with VH1, released a video for their single Watch Over You containing clips from the upcoming season of Celebrity Rehab. [citation needed] Most of the celebrities (apart from Kitaen, Busey and Stewart) agreed to make a transitional move into a sober living home, which was filmed at Sober House,-although Busey expressed interest in attending sober live as a speaker. Conaway was released early from center in the final of Season 2 after kicking his girlfriend in the ribs during an argument. As soon as Conaway Conaway to his home, he continued abusing painkillers. During Sober House, Adler, Smith and Binzer relapse. Adler has made repeated appearances on Loveline talking about his success with sobriety and how his life is drastically different for the better. On 15 September 2009, Kitaen was arrested for drink driving. [56] Amber Smith later appeared in spinoff Sex Rehab. In 2009, Rodney King and Amber Smith appeared as panel speakers for a group of addicts at the Pasadena Recovery Center, marking 11 months of sobriety for King, and a year and a half of sobriety for Smith. [47] Nikki McKibbin marked a year of sobriety on November 10, 2020, McKibbin died of a brain aneurysm at the age of 42. On May 12, 2011, Jeff Conaway was hospitalized for pneumonia, which he was placed in a coma. [58] He was later taken out of life support, and died on May 27, 2011. [59] [60] He was the second Celebrity Rehab cast member to die in 2011, following the death of Mike Starr two months before. [61] Pinsky attributed Conaway's death to his addiction, saying: What happens is, as with most opiate addicts, they eventually take a little too much... and they aspiere, so what is in their mouth comes into their lungs ... That's what happened to Jeff. [62] King was found dead in his swimming pool on July 17, 2014. He was 47. [63] His autopsy results showed that he died of accidental drowning, although alcohol, cocaine and marijuana were found in his blood and were contributing factors. On April 30, 2009, it was announced on Futon Critic that Celebrity Rehab had been renewed for the third season, and a new spinoff titled Sex Rehab with Dr. Drew was put into production. [65] Sex Rehab premiered on July 1, 2015. Season 3 of Celebrity Rehab premiered on January 7, 2010. [66] Patient Heidi Fleiss appeared to live in solitude in the desert of Nevada while caring for 25 parrots. [31] [67] [68] [69] [69] Pinsky did brain scans of her, which showed significant frontal lobe dysfunction, which Pinskyoretized was behind her inability to empathize with humans, and her affinity for doing so with birds. [31] Actor Tom Sizemore had been approached to appear in Season 1, but declined. He met with Pinsky about performing in the second season, sitting in Pinsky's office for two hours, as Pinsky tells it, sweating and quite high on drugs, talking a million miles an hour, behaving as he would then deciding he doesn't want to. He eventually decided to appear in Season 3, but didn't arrive in the season premiere with the others, forcing Pinsky's colleague Bob Forrest to seek him out. Pinsky adds in the season's fourth episode that he believes Sizemore's girlfriend is also a user, and their relationship is a threat to his sobriety. [70] Pinsky points to Sizemore's history as a symbol of an addict to commit to rehab. [31] Due to the tumultuous past relationship between patients Sizemore and Fleiss, their consent to be thrown together in the same season was obtained before filming. [13] In a comment on Dennis Rodman's detachment from the rehabilitation process, Pinsky said Rodman was hyper-focused in some ways, and in others, completely blank, and noted that Rodman did not understand what the other patients experienced or how they perceived him. Pinsky concluded Rodman may have Asperger's syndrome, a diagnosis that a colleague from UCLA Medical Center agreed. [13] Mackenzie Phillips had achieved months of sobriety before checking into the Pasadena Recovery Center. [71] Joey Kovar, who previously sought treatment for his addiction to cocaine and alcohol during his stint on 2008's The Real World: Hollywood,[72] was spurred to return to rehab for his recurring addiction at the impending birth of his and his girlfriend Nikki's [70] child. [73] Pinsky commented on Lisa D'Amato by saying: I would classify her as an addict in denial. It's the only disease you have to convince people of. [71] After her ejection from Sex Rehab with Dr. Drew, Kari Ann Peniche was allowed back to the Pasadena Recovery Center after she called Pinsky and asked for help. Pinsky, who explains in this season's fourth episode that treatment for substance abuse must take place before treatment for sex abuse, revealed that her aggressive behavior during Sex Rehab was derived from drugs she smuggled into a teddy bear and which were difficult to detect during drug tests because of the medication Peniche took for attention deficit disorder. Irwin says her behavior had changed by her second appearance, though she did punch a camera man at one point. [13] Season three Cast Member Notability Addiction Lisa D'Amato Model and Electronic Rock Musician[74] Alcohol; [75] [76] marijuana; Amphetamines cocaine mushrooms[76] Heidi Fleiss Former American mistress[74] Methamphetamine; [75] [76] Valium; Xanax; Vicodin (Fleiss states that she comes out with a prescription for Suboxone.) [76] Joey Kovar Cast member on The Real World: Hollywood,[74] Alcohol; cocaine ecstasy [75] [76] [77] methamphetamine; steroids[75] Mindy McCready Country music singer[74] OxyContin; alcohol [75] [76] (McCready states that she takes prescription Xanax for anxiety as needed, and that painkillers found among her belongings during Ingestion were for her shoulder, which was dislocated a month before.[76]) Kari Ann Peniche Miss Teen USA 2002 and the subject of a Playboy pictorial[74] Methamphetamine[78] Mackenzie Phillips Actress[74] Heroin; cocaine[75][76] (Formerly used marijuana.[76]) Dennis Rodman Former basketball player[74] Alcohol[75][76] Tom Sizemore Actor[79] Opiates; benzodiazepines methamphetamine [80] marijuana; [78] [80] Klonopin (previously used 1991-1996)[78] Mike Starr Former Alice in Chains bassist[74] Heroin; methadone methamphetamine cocaine Marijuana. [75] [76] Peniche, Starr, Fleiss, Sizemore and Rodman all agreed to participate in a sober living facility after treatment,[81] which was described on the second season of Sober House. [82] Kovar indicated that he would get a sponsor, go to meetings, and go to sober living after his girlfriend moved into their new home. McCready, citing the need to return to her son, indicated that she would go to Al-Anon. [81] Since the treatment has been completed, Pinsky says that D'Amato, who rejected sober life but agreed to go to meetings,[81] works pretty well for me. My bet is that she will continue to flirt with using but will have a deeper understanding now of her behavior. [71] Phillips and McCready appeared with Pinsky in a segment about women and addiction on the March 17, 2010 episode of The View. [83] Mike Starr was arrested on February 18, 2011 on two felony counts of possession of a controlled substance for 6 pills of the painkiller Opana and 6 pills of Xanax, an anti-anxiety drug. [84] Starr was later found dead on 8 November 1989. D'Amato won the competition. On August 17, 2012, 29-year-old Joey Kovar was found dead at a friend's home near Chicago. Autopsy results, however inconclusive, and cause of death were until a toxicology test from August 18, though police stated that no foul play was indicated, and Kovar's brother, David, denied the drugs were the cause, as he stated that Kovar was maintaining his sobriety. [77] [86] [87] An autopsy revealed that Kovar died of opiate poisoning. On February 12, 2013, McCready committed suicide at the age of 37. [89] The cause of death was a single gunshot wound to the head. [90] [91] McCready is the third cast member from this season to die, and the fifth cast member from the series assembled to die within a two-year period, although her death is the first in which a cast member's addiction did not contribute factor to their death. Pinsky released a statement saying he was sorry for McCready's death and that he had reached out to her recently after hearing about the apparent suicide of her boyfriend and the father of her younger child. Pinsky also stated mental health issues can be life-threatening and must be treated with the same intensity and resources as any other dangerous potentially life-threatening medical condition. [92] Season 4 In May 2010, model and reality TV veteran Tila Tequila, who revealed an addiction to prescription drugs, was the first cast member announced for season four. However, on July 1, it was announced that she was retiring from the cast. [94] Filming on season four ended the week of August [97] It began to be broadcast on 1 January 2010. RadarOnline reported Rachel Uchitel, who had been living at a sober living facility in Malibu, California, left the facility with Pinsky's permission to visit the World Trade Center site where her fiance, James Andrew O'Grady, was killed in the September 11, 2001 attack.[98] which Uchitel explained was when her life began to unravel, culminating in a massive breakdown two years later. Uchitel spoke to other 9/11 families at the site, and was moved by her meeting with them. [99] Season four Cast Cast Member Notability Addiction Jason Davis Actor, socialite[100] Heroin; OxyContin; Xanax[101] Janice Dickinson Model, fashion photographer, actor, writer and agent. [102] During the reunion show, Jason Davis claimed that he had relapsed twice, but was currently sober. However, on January 12, 2011, he was arrested for drug possession and subsequently charged with possession of a crime and under the influence of drugs. [103] Davis subsequently died in Los Angeles on 16. [104] Season 5 March 3, 2011, Amy Fisher, Jeremy Jackson, Bai Ling, Michael Lohan and Michaelae Salahi were announced as fifth season contestants. [105] [106] Subsequent cast members added to the season roster later that month include Season 2 contestant Steven Adler,[106] actress Sean Young,[106][107] former Major League Baseball pitcher Dwight Gooden [106][108] and Survivor second runner-up Jessica Sugar Kiper. [109] Michaelae Salahi was later removed from the show because she had no addiction. Her husband, Tareq Salahi confirmed this, whether she used to Pinsky to treat her multiple sclerosis, and as on this condition. She was discharged after she refused to meet their demand that her problems be depicted as something other than MS. [110] [111] [112] [113] [114] Season 5 premiered on 26 April [25] Season five Cast Cast member Notability Addiction Steven Adler Former Guns N' Roses drummer, returning from Season 2 Marijuana[21] Amy Fisher Long Island Lolita, who shot her then-lover Joey Buttafuoco's wife, Mary Jo, in the face. Alcohol (previously used cocaine but quit six years before)[115] Sean Young Actress (Blade Runner, Dune)[118] Alcohol[115] Season 6 For season six, filmed in early 2012,[4] the show was renamed Rehab with Dr. Drew, as the addicts selected as cast members would be non-celebrities[5] in their 20s and 30s[119] whose matches would be depicted in eight episodes. VH1 Executive Vice President, Original Programming & Production Jeff Olde thus explained the move away from celebrities: This season, the moment felt right to turn our focus from celebrities to young adults who could benefit from Dr. Drew and his team's professional expert treatment. In some ways we felt that stripping away celebrity layers could reach even more viewers and touch them in a different way. Season 6 premiered on 16[5] Season Six Cast Cast Member Notability Addiction Biographical details Eric Adams[120] South Boston, Massachusetts[120] heroin[120] Eric, who is 24, started drinking when he was 15. Although he never drank much, he started taking drugs when he was 16.[120] after his mother – also an addict who was recovering – moved to Ireland to be with the father of Eric's then two-year-old brother, who had been deported. This caused a traumatic sense of abandonment, which Eric says broke him. [121] His drug addiction began with oxy, ecstasy and cocaine he would take while partying, and graduated to heroin when he was 19 or 20. He has been arrested about six times, and the day before he checked into rehab, he was arrested by Boston police for distributing drugs in a school zone. If he is convicted, the up to 20 years in Ashleigh Izz[120][122] Los Angeles alcohol[120] Ashleigh's drinking began when her grandmother gave her wine at age 2. She drinks a bottle of vodka a day. As a result of her drinking, she has kidney failure, ulcers[120] and seizures.[120][123] which she has been to the hospital ten times where doctors told her she would die. She also suffers from poor body image as a result of being told she was fat, and says her mother neglected her. Pinsky says her detox symptoms can lead to full delirium and can potentially be life-threatening. [120] Ashleigh and her younger sister were both molested as children. [124] Erika Melahn[120][125] Hollywood. California[120] cocaine, alcohol[120] Erika was pressured to remain thin when modeling as a child, leading to poor body image and anorexia nervosa. She indicates that a parent left her at 16, and she was forced to move out at 17, just before she graduated from high school. [120] She started taking cocaine around 19.[29] and moved to Hollywood at the age of 20 to become a model, but found that the industry was filled with older men exploiting young women by taking drugs to take advantage of them. Now 22, she parties a lot, and her boyfriend of 15 months, Stefanos, who is 22 years her senior, does drugs with her. [120] Michael Mariano[120] Roxbury, New Jersey[120] [120] Michael, who comes from an upper-class family, says he was a straight-A student, and successful at sports as a child, winning a taekwondo championship at one point. He was 16 when he started taking marijuana, eventually graduating to ecstasy at 17, and prescription pills, before turning to opiates like heroin at 18. He says he made up to 40 bags of heroin a day but has reduced that amount and hit the bottom after landing in jail because of his addiction. [120] He hopes to go back to school, where he studied business. [126] Deanna Salamone[120][127] Rochester, New York[120] marijuana, ecstasy, OxyContin, heroin[120] Deanna, who is 25 years old,[126] has a 3-year-old son named Dominic, with whom she shares joint custody with her mother. Dominic's father is a drug dealer whose three years in prison for weapons charges will end within days. She started taking pills when he went to prison, starting with OxyContin, which led to heroin, 20 bags that she takes daily. She also sold drugs, and resorted to working as an escort for a short time to give her medication. [120] She was sexually assaulted between the age of 7 and 13 and was raped twice, including once in front of her then 1-year-old son,[120][126] and another in which she was gang-raped under the threat of use of force by six men when she was a dealer. [124] Her mother has been unsympathetic to these incidents, which characterise them as the consequence of being an addict and drug dealer. [126] Deanna also says she suffered from psychological psychological as a child. [120] Jasmen Cinnamon Evans[126][128] Dallas, Texas[126] alcohol[126] Jasmen is a 25-year-old model and rap music artist, originally from Chicago, Illinois. She has been drinking since she was 15, and can drink up to 40 beers or a gallon of wine a night. She and her husband have a 4-year-old son named Jaden. She has been arrested for driving while intoxicated and has blackouts and a liver magnified by alcohol liver disease, which Dr. Drew says could develop into an advanced form if he doesn't stop drinking. [126] She suffers from guilt over a miscarriage when she was four months pregnant. [129] During the season, she tries to repair her relationship with her father, Mario, a recovering alcohol and heroin addict and former gang member who was not present in her life because he was 18 when she was conceived. [124] Heather Swartz[126] Malibu, California[126] alcohol, crack, heroin, OxyContin, LSD, ketamine[126] Heather. 43,[130] began drinking after she was raped at the age of 10. At 15, she sold cocaine and made people work for her. Eventually, she learned to forge signatures, which she used to sign herself out of school, after which she traveled around a lot, characterizing her life as jet-setting to tenth degree. She hit rock bottom shortly after she contacted the producers, and entered another rehab facility, thus entering the Pasadena Recovery Center with a few days of sobriety. She says she can drink up to nine or ten bottles of wine a day, and sprinkles heroin on crack to take the edge off. [126] Andrew Drewbee Arthur[29][126] [131] Tampa, Florida[126] Ambien, Xanax, marijuana, alcohol, oxycodone, Suboxone[126] Drewbee is a special case for Dr. Drew, whom the letter his mother wrote to Dr. Drew stood out to him. He has been doing a variety of drugs since the age of 13, characterizing himself a trash can for missing a single drug of choice. He says he had everything he needed as a child and may have been a bit spoiled. He began to develop hyperactivity approximately in third grade, which he was put at Adderall until about ninth grade. He joined his first band, Radar Reset, at 15, and was signed by a label of 18. He sang for the Jackson family after the death of Michael Jackson. But his drug use ended his career at the age of 22. Although he is best friends with his musician father,[126] Jeff,[29] who taught him music, Drewbee's drug addiction puts him in constant conflict with his parents, especially Jeff, whom he has abused and exploited for money and drugs. Now Drewbee takes about eight Ambien a day, which he mixes with Roxycodone, which he adds. [126] Jeff himself has been recovering from an addiction to pills for 17 years. [29] In Episode 6, Bob Forrest comments that the level of codependency between Drewbee and his father is such that it can actually kill Drewbee, Forrest had never come across before. In the same episode, Pinsky reveals that Drewbee sustained head injuries that further impair his judgment. [124] DVD releases Celebrity Rehab have been released on DVD exclusively through Amazon.
