The kitchen design should reflect the individual's individuality. Kitchen cabinet options: A wide range of kitchen cabinet options available, from manufacturing to custom cabinets. Kitchen design: Add unique touches to your kitchen, such as glass door display cabinets, plate racks, small cubby drawers and full extended drawer slides, for kitchen design tips that give kitchen designer Cheryl Kees Clendenon's kitchen personality. Transcript for Video by Danny Lipford: Now, more kitchen renovations than any other renovation in your home will need some real advanced planning, thinking about how you'll place your kitchen, and how you'd like to see it. In other words, many difficult decisions have to be made, and most of these decisions revolve around cabinet selection. The first thing you will face is whether they will be manufactured or custom cabinets, the name means that custom cabinets are made specifically for the kitchen, which can be an advantage if the layout or style you want is really unique. In recent years, however, major cabinet manufacturers have diversified their product lines to meet almost any taste or layout requirement. Since cabinet making is a very labor intensive business, cost is one of the main differences. And while you can pay more for custom cabinets in areas with high labor costs, you can negotiate in areas with lower wages. In addition, there may be some differences in the materials used. Custom cabinet stores tend to use mainly hard wood and plywood, and large manufacturers can rely on composite materials with all but the highest end products. In both cases, doing your homework will give you a quality cabinet, but you still have to decide what it looks like. Cheryl Keith Clendenon: What I want to say in terms of cabinets is that we have to fit the needs of the kitchen, but for example, we want to have a sis-boom-bah, a little bit of house-a-dee-doo-dah, something that gives the kitchen its uniqueness. Since everyone wants to have something unique, no one wants to go to the kitchen, see the walls of the cabinets, whether they know in advance. And that's a mistake many people will make. They think every square inch should be a cabinet, a cabinet with a closed door, but they take advantage of things like a glass cabinet with a plate rack with this little bite drawer. You'll be surprised how useful this little drawer can be. But except for its usefulness, it gives the kitchen its personality and is something really important. Now there are things like this whole extended drawer that revolutioned the cabinet industry when people started doing this because you can take your drawer all the way and make the most of that space. same as a big deep drawer you can Pots and pans allows you to split them, and I can make even small galley kitchens very efficiently by how you utilize cabinets. So when customers come in and they know it so well, I basically like the footprint of the kitchen we have now, but it doesn't work very well. Sometimes it's the layout of the way people move, and sometimes it's where cabinets are allocated. In an 8-foot-high ceiling kitchen, you'll see many sofas going across the tower with no ducts, lights or anything in them. So we want to take it and have those extra shelves, even if you don't use those shelves every day, you can't get to it, where you christmas dishes are stored or holiday ones, things like that. You can get away with the upper cabinets less than people actually think they can. But when they come to see me and suggest a hood, do something like this, or do something, they think they don't know if it's really useful. I don't want to see my dishes or what, but if they have this space that fits the rest of the kitchen, then the same thing is to give their kitchen personality. And let's face what everyone wants. Every customer wants a kitchen with a distinct stamp of individuality and attitude. It's not just all about features, it's all about looks as well. Photo: Teri Turan Whether you're buying a new one or upgrading a kitchen cabinet door you already have, there are a few things to consider before starting a project. Perhaps the cheapest option in remodeling facing a new or re-existing kitchen cabinet is to replace the door. This means that boxes containing shelves and drawers can remain in place, reducing the cost of demolition, construction and purchase. Only the front of the cabinet is replaced and typically includes new doors, face frames, and hardware. If you are satisfied with the layout and the current number of cabinets, but want to give it a new look, this can be the right way to go. Choosing materials you need to decide whether you want all the wood, wood veneers, or laminate doors and face fronts. For veneer cabinets, thin wooden plywood is applied to composite materials such as plywood or particleboard (plywood is better, but more expensive). Laminate kitchen cabinet doors are often made of polychlorinized vinyl sheets that are applied to substrates to provide heating, molding and smooth appearance. If the cabinet is still in good condition, you can change the color of the walls, re-surface the cabinet or re-paint it to change the appearance of the kitchen. Cabinet rematches replacing veneers are more expensive, but save 50% over complete remodeling. If the cabinet is not laminate or melamine, you can paint it yourself. Oiled with citrus Remove household cleaners, doors and hardware, you may need to lower the sand before painting, but first apply a primer sealer. New drawers and door pools will also make a big difference. The project is very cool - and much easier than remodeling a full DIY kitchen.
