For an individual, it represents properties owned, less than any debt a person has. For the company, net worth is the cost of the business. This is a significant section of the supplier's balance sheet and is sometimes called owner's capital or equity. Assets: To arrive at the net worth of the business, you must first calculate the current value of the company's assets. Assets typically include cash, cash equivalents, property, inventory, machinery and buildings. For people, assets include cash, savings accounts, property such as homes and cars, investment accounts and other valuable properties such as antiques and jewellery. Commitments & Debts: The term liability refers to outstanding debts. It's basically money owed to someone else. It can be bank debt, bonds or promissory duty. It can also be more immediate debts, such as outstanding payments that the company owes to suppliers or a line of credit at the bank. For individuals, credit card debt, car loans and mortgages make up the majority of liabilities. Cost:Net worth and fairness essentially mean the same, the cost of the organization. Sometimes net worth is known as shareholder equity if the business is owned by shareholders. Net worth is very important to them. For individuals, equity in the house is something you own, free and clear of the mortgage holder. For the homeowner, much of the net worth comes from the value of the house, minus the amount owed on any mortgage. How to increase the net worth? A firm or person can increase their net worth by paying liabilities or increasing assets. If a business has a positive return on its earnings and earnings report at the end of the year, it increases net worth in the form of retained earnings. On the other hand, negative earnings (losses) will reduce net worth. Paying dividends can also reduce the company's net worth. Worth.
