All of his attacks are infused with aura, have some properties similar to overcoming priorities for some attacks such as Forward Smash. Excellent strokes for guarding the edges. Very fast pummel. Powerful grab game for combinations. The Aura Sphere is a powerful missile capable of killing, especially when Lucario is in greater percentages. It also deals with harm to opponents close to Lucari as they charge him. Excellent recovery thanks to its floating, jumps and extreme speed; the latter is greatly enhanced by the Aura. Force Palm is a command catch that can also be used as a long-range move if the capture fails to connect. Double Team is a counter. Weaknesses Bad knockback on most moves except Lucario is on higher percentages, which means he has trouble killing without his Aura. It relies heavily on throws to be combined. There's no kill throws outside of Force Palm. Recovery is weaker in lower percentages. Double Team can easily result in suicide if used in the air, especially if Lucario is not facing the platform. Summary Changes from the model SSBWU/3DS Aesthetics Lucario has a more muted color scheme. His fur is more detailed, similar to a brawl. Aura is now cyan in color instead of indigo, and its visual effects are smoother. On the high aura, the flames produced are more lively and intense, leaving a trail as Lucario moves. Attributes Like all characters, Lukari's jumpsquat now needs three frames to complete. Luciori's Aura is weaker in terms of accumulating damage, however, her moves are stronger with little or no aura. Ground Attacks Aerial Attacks Neutral Aerial now scores twice instead of once, regardless of which side Lucario hits his opponent on. In addition, Lucario is able to pull opponents with offense, making him more likely to track. Forward Aerial has reduced landing delays. Back Aerial offers less damage and knockback to opponents, but has fewer finishes and a startup backlog, and has a bigger hitbox. Up Aerial has altered animation, with Lucario backflipping after the opening kick. Up Aerial has increased the lag. Down Aerial has bigger boxes for the echoes. Down from the air it stops a little less in the air. Grabs and Throws Special Attacks Aura Sphere has fewer endlagas and can now be skipped. The Aura Sphere travels slower. Aura Sphere is now visually closer as it appears in anime and games. It has a visual effect of energy absorption when charging and no longer emits a trail of smoke at launch. Force Palm has increased the catch range in an empty range, making it more likely to grab opponents with offense. Extreme Speed travels a shorter distance. Extreme speed has fewer lags and delays in landing. Double Team's counterattack is activated faster, making the offense harder to avoid. Double Team has smaller active frames. Although for some, Lucario may still need some introduction. The very popular Pokemon is the main place of the competitive scene of its domestic series. It was also the first creature to appear to have Mega Evolution. Whether it will affect his status in Smash Ultimate or not is up for debate. But this creature will surely need something to stand out among its many, many peers. Smash Ultimate sports 74 different characters to play at launch - including each previous character from the super-franchise and a bunch of fresh faces. That doesn't even include gluttony of DLC fighters. trophy assists and more. There's so much that no one could keep track of everything. That's why we put together a guide for each individual character. Lucario is known for his late-game skill. Agile, martial artist-type flaming fist pack more punch as battle drags on. That makes him an uncertain fighter to choose from. While some players who like to live dangerously may be able to tap into the creature's full potential. According to Nintendo's description of Lucius... Lucario is the only fighter whose attacking strength increases as damage is needed. A fighter who truly shines when he's pinched, choose Luciar for an exciting battle. Lucario Moves Aura Sphere (B) – Charges a Ball of Energy can damage enemies even while it is powered. The pressure restarts it. Force Palm (Side + B) - Releases concentrated energy with a powerful impact. Grab your enemies if they're close enough. Extreme Speed (Up + B) - Dashes through the air and attacks at the end. It can turn mid-flight with directional input. Double Team (Down + B) – Prepares for an incoming attack and counterattacks with a sliding punch. Aura Storm (Final Smash) – Lucario Mega evolves into Mega Lucario and jumps straight up. Then Lucario fires Aura straight down. The Aura angle can be adjusted left or right. Aim for opponents to deal with the most damage you can. Strengths & Weaknesses Strengths Lucario is still the ultimate risk/reward character. His basic mechanic, Aura, makes you run into more damage while taking more damage on your own. This gives Lucari the greatest comeback potential in the game. As time moves on, his moves become even more devastating. Lucario shines his back against the wall, banking on that one good move to seal the match in his favour. Weaknesses. but Aura is a double-edged sword; Lucario can do more damage in higher percentages, but less on low-to-none. That, combined with his less-than-stellar mobility, makes Lucari an easy pick at the start of the match. Try not to be bullied right away and lock in one-on-one situations, where you can really shine. Lucario Outfits Well, would you look at that? It's another pallet-swapping character... True, Lucario (and most Pokemon) don't wear rags. So it would be hard for Nintendo to shake up the creature design too. Although it would be nice to see Mega Lucario represented in the eight-costume final. Nevertheless, Lucario gets points because it is simple and brightly colored. This helps their alternative color schemes really pop up in the background. And that's what we have to say about Aura Pokemon! His chi-like powers are certainly inexpensive, but what he ultimately do with them is up to you. Just try not to get smashed before unlocking Lucario's full potential with too much damage percentage.
