By Krithika Narayan, Class 2020 Friday, February 15, Net Impact gathered the socially conscious among us for the Social Impact Summit in Gleacher. The theme of this year's summit was social intrapreneurship: creating impact for society and value for the employer. Why is it important? As one of the moderators pointed out, most of us as graduates won't work for ourselves – more than 96% according to the FT 2018 employment report. This summit identified how we can impact issues we are passionate about, within the limits of a corporate role. The summit was composed of three panels followed by a keynote speech by Monali Shah, Head of Industrial Solutions for Smart Cities and Urban Mobility at Google. The first panel, entitled Setting the Stage: What is Social Intrapreneurship, focused on the practical aspects of intrapreneurship: finding a sponsor, understanding the current landscape (‘Why are things as they are?’) and continue to be passionate and dedicated to the ultimate goal. The rapporteurs also discussed doing well by doing good, pursuing social impact objectives and at the same time improving the workplace (and the bottom line) with your efforts. The second panel focused on equity and inclusion: definition and how to promote it in a professional environment. The third panel introduced Sustainability into the conversation: the sustainability of a nascent initiative, as well as promoting sustainability-focused initiatives. Loudspeakers from all the panels talked about their experiences, giving rise to their side hustle and bustle at frontline work. A Morningstar Booth alum who had published a gender report on fund management highlighted the step-by-step nature of building an initiative, slowly connecting the dots within an organization to formalize it. Lead speaker Monali Shah meets with Caroline Grossman, a professor at the Rustandy Center. After founding Net Impact at Booth, Monali passed the reins to Caroline The keynote speaker, Monali Shah, outlined her professional career, showing a clear passion for using technology to create a fairer and more sustainable society. With stint in companies large and small, such as Navteq, Nokia and Here, she emphasized creating roles for herself and carving opportunities. We have noticed that we are often our greatest obstacles to success and he has urged everyone here to start and create. With regard to smart cities, he noted that the three challenges are congestion, iniquity and lack of sustainability, and that the main factor limiting upward mobility is commuting time, particularly for minority communities. The Lady he worked to change this using Google Maps in collaboration with the Chicago Department of Transportation, establishing project visibility and clear goals for the body. Ms. Shah incidentally started Net Impact while at Booth, passing the reins after graduating from Caroline Grossman, Grossman, he is currently a faculty member at the Rustandy Centre. Will Towns, Gem McReary, Mambu Sherman and Juan Pablo Prieto discuss equity and inclusion Overall, the Summit was enlightening and inspiring for anyone looking to incorporate social impact into their professional lives but unable to understand how (this author included). As always, booth alumni have been impressive, providing both inspiration and roadmap to make that change. I look forward to this summit expanding in the future! davisenterprise.com - By Caroline GrossmanSpecial at the EnterpriseThe #metoo movement has thrown Harvey Weinstein, a convicted rapist, into prison. He deserved the harshest sentence for his crimes. The #metoo movement came from a place of reckoning: to take down the men who abused women. He tried to drag down the evils that lurked in the belly of the entertainment industry. The beginning of the movement opened crucial conversations about the appropriate treatment of women. davisenterprise.com - By Caroline GrossmanSpecial at The EnterpriseIn a world where diversity is celebrated, why don't we celebrate all kinds of diversity? Why do we limit our desire for diversity to ethnic or racial diversity? Is there no room for political diversity? As a libertarian - or should I say Unicorn Davis - I'm used to walking near a Warren sign or Bernie Yard.
