Nock Thoroughly reviewed and updated, and packed with new pedagogical techniques, the third edition of this popular text will provide students with a vivid introduction to psychology Daniel Schacter is William R. Kenan, Jr. Professor of Psychology at Harvard University, USA. Schacter received his BA from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. He then developed a keen interest in amnesic disorders associated with various types of brain damage. He continued his research and education at the University of Toronto, where he received his PhD in 1981. He taught at the faculty in Toronto for the next six years before joining the University of Arizona's psychology department in 1987. In 1991, he joined the faculty at Harvard University. His research examines the relationship between conscious and unconscious forms of memory and the nature of distortions and errors in memory. Many of Schacter's studies are summarized in his 1996 book, Searching for Memory: The Brain, The Mind, and The Past, and his 2001 book, The Seven Sins of Memory: How the Mind Forgets and Remembers, both winners of the APA's William James Book Award. Daniel Gilbert is Harvard College Professor of Psychology at Harvard University, USA. After attending the Community College of Denver and completing his BA from the University of Colorado, Denver, he went on to earn his Doctorate at Princeton University. From 1985-1996, he taught at the Faculty of the University of Texas, Austin, during which time he received the American Psychological Association's Distinguished Scientific Award for an Early Career Contribution to Psychology. In 1996, he joined the faculty of Harvard University. Gilbert has won many awards, including the Phi Beta Kappa Teaching Prize and a Guggenheim Fellowship. His research into affective prediction is an attempt to understand how and how well people predict their emotional responses to future events. He is the author of the national bestseller Stumble on Happiness. Daniel Wegner (deceased) was professor of psychology at Harvard University, USA. He obtained his BS in 1970 and PhD in 1974, both from Michigan State University. He began his teaching career at Trinity University in San Antonio, TX, before his appointments at the University of Virginia in 1990 and Harvard University in 2000. He was a fellow of the American Association for the Advancement of Science and former associate editor of Psychological Review. His research focused on thought suppression and mental social memory in relationships and groups, and the experience of conscious will. His pioneering work in thought suppression and consciousness served as a based on two trade titles, White Bears and Other Unwanted Thoughts and The Illusion of Conscious Will, both of which were called Choice Outstanding Academic Books. He died in 2013 after a three-year battle with ALS. Matthew K. Nock is professor of psychology and director of the Laboratory for Clinical and Developmental Research at Harvard University, USA. He received his BA from Boston University and his doctorate in psychology from Yale University in 2003 and completed his clinical internship at Bellevue Hospital and the New York University Child Study Center. His research is aimed at promoting understanding of why people behave in ways that are harmful to themselves, with an emphasis on suicide and other forms of self-harm. His research is multidisciplinary in nature and uses a range of methodological approaches to better understand how this behavior develops, how to predict them and how they occur. His work has been recognized by the receipt of four early career awards from the American Psychological Association, the Association for Behavioral and Cognitive Therapies, and the American Association of Suicidology; in 2011 he was appointed MacArthur Fellow. In addition to conducting research, he is a consultant and scientific advisor to the National Institutes of Health, the World Health Organization's World Mental Health Survey Initiative, the American Psychological Association, and the American Psychiatric Association DSM&E5 Childhood and Adolescent Disorder Work Group. At Harvard, he received several educational awards, including the Roslyn Abramson Teaching Award and the Petra Shattuck Prize. He joins Daniel Schacter and Daniel Gilbert as co-author of Psychology.
