Great plains food

Credit: Ethan Tweedie Photography Everyone loves America's coastline, but if you're one of many still considering the Great Plains national flyer, there's a good chance you're missing points. The beauty of plainness is not only in itself but also in the sky, in what you think when you look at them, and in what they are not, wrote Ian Frazier in his classic road trip book, Great Plains.Hardly a flaw, the emptiness here is a treasure. In Nebraska's Sandhills, for example, the largest intact meadow ecosystem in North America, grass-covered sand dunes cover an area of nearly 20,000 square miles. Stand in the middle, and you'll meet the horizon in all directions without interruption, with no buildings or droning interstates to distract you from the spectacle that is planet Earth.And that's the emptiness here in the Great Plains lending many people on this list their surprise. Picture this: a green fairway extending into the distance, a single flag waving in the wind next to a changing natural sand bunker, an array of mixed home pastures to grouse, birds, deer, and more. Using the pristine meadow ecosystem of north-central Nebraska, Sand Hills Golf Club is consistently ranked among the best golf courses in the world. And in Kansas's sparsely populated Flint Hills, the organizers of the annual Symphony in the Flint Hills fill the void not with traffic and high-rise apartments, but music. From North Dakota to Texas, the Great Plains is dotted with gems reserved for those willing to venture inside. For a luxury trip through the so-called fly-through country, start with these 13 unforgettable features. Credit: Thomas Fricke/Getty Images The only recognized art museum in North Dakota, the Plains Museum of Art is located in a former Harvester International warehouse in downtown Fargo. Dave Bercher, project manager said: Modern galleries contrast with the rough texture of the wood walls and heavy brick around them. It still felt like a shed, but one that was refined and refinished. With a series of rotating and permanent collections, including a large state mural by pop artist James Rosenquist and an exhibition of satirical, silly works by Chippewa artist David Bradley-Plains Art Museum is anything but amateur. The Plains Museum of Art is actually the most prominent art center among twin cities and Seattle poet North Dakota Shadd Piehl, a regular visitor. It is the first art museum to serve North Dakota and has since become an integral part of the community and art in the region through world-class exhibitions, programming, and events. Advertising Credit: Buynlarge/Getty Images Built into In 1926, the Fargo Theater originally had silent films, high-wire acts, vaudeville shows and more. On the right you may have caught an appearance by Babe Ruth, Boris Karloff, Lyle Talbot, or Glenda Farrell, but regardless, you're sure to catch a skilled organ artist behind The Mighty Wurlitzer. In 1937, while installing the latest film technology, the Baroque building underwent a extensive interior renovation, and in 1999 the entire building was restored. Today, the Fargo Theatre is considered an Art Deco masterpiece and a cultural center of the community, screening independent and foreign films in two separate auditoriums. Without the Fargo Theater, Fargo native Matthew Bergh said, would not be able to enjoy a variety of in-house films, sneak out to show midnight's cult movies, and discover music that wasn't presented on five major FM stations. Credit: YinYang/Getty Images Eroding at a rate of nearly an inch per year, Badlands will disappear altogether in just 500,000-year-old blink of an eye during geological time. Don't miss the chance to explore the other world landscape in southwest South Dakota, one of the world's richest fossil beds. If you lack time, you will not regret driving through the park. But if you can spare a day, Fill those water bottles, grab a hiking stick and take any route to Saddle Pass, where you'll be rewarded with an unsymlike panoramic picture of the White River Valley. One of the largest Powwow Black Hills in Rapid City, SD, attracts thousands of dancers and singers each year, and features not only traditional powwow, but also a major art show, the Miss He Sapa (or Miss Black Hills) pageant, sports tournaments, and more. I've always loved the songs drummers sing, knowing that every song sung in Lakota keeps their language alive, said Thomas Ridley, a member of the Ute Mountain Ute Tribe who visits each year. I love that when you come to powwow you are always welcome to dance even if you are not in regalia. If you want to get out of town, try the Cheyenne Sioux Powwow River on the Cheyenne Indian River Reservation, or Oglala Nation Powwow and Rodeo on the Pine Ridge Indian Reservation. You won't forget your first powwow. Drums, dancers, colors, attractions, and smells – it's a celebration like no other. In July 1928, Alex Carlton Johnson, vice president of Chicago and Northwestern Railroad, opened the doors to his Showplace of the West, a hotel designed to combine both Native American and German culture, two of the Dakotas' dominant groups. Today, this 143-room hotel boasts an Irish pub (Paddy O'Neill's) and a rooftop Vertex Sky Bar, overlooking Rapid City city centre and the black hills in the distance. With a nod to history and an emphasis on all modern amenities, Hotel Alex Johnson is one of South Dakota's many hidden gems. Credit: traveler1116/Getty Images Completed in 1932 for just under $10 million, the Nebraska Capitol building was the first state capital to depart from the national prototype. At 15 storeys tall, the building is higher than the capital, topped by a gold dome and a 19-foot-long bronze statue of The Sower. The interior features marble floors, vaulted polychrome tile ceilings, brilliant murals depicting Nebraska's indigenous and ao daimacked history, and intricate bronze-body statues of notable Nebraskans such as Willa Cather, Buffalo Bill Cody, and Chief Standing Bear.Without a doubt one of the most unique and detailed statehouses in the country, the Nebraska Capitol Building is a must-see for anyone traveling through the State. It really is an epic work and a great place to spend some time in quiet reflection, says writer and Lincoln resident Jacob Zlomke. I visit a few times a month and still find small details that I have never noticed before. Advertising credit: BirdImages/Getty Images Every spring, nearly 600,000 Sandhill cranes gather along the Platte River in central Nebraska during their annual migration north from Mexico and the southern Great Plains. At Audubon's Rowe Reserve near Kearney, Nebraska, you can enjoy amazing views from the observation blinds strategically located along the river. This is a wonderful life experience. I think everyone goes away modestly, wrote David Yarnold, President and CEO of the National Audubon Association. It really puts life into perspective, and helps people understand how important it is to protect natural places for generations to come. The cacophony of cranes, or what the great naturalist Aldo Leopold calls the trumpet in the orchestra of evolution, is something you won't soon forget. Credit: David Cannon/Getty Images At the beginning of the 20th century, most Americans – if they knew about the Nebraska Sandhills in the all-considered area a barren waste of useless sand, according to the annual report of the state agricultural council in 1894.Today, that so-called barren waste is home to some of the largest farms in Nebraska– the dunes are covered with a variety of mixed grasslands and one of the most pristine, if still slightly unsung, golf courses in the country. Ranked as the ninth best golf course in the country in 2017 by Golf Digest, Sand Hills Golf Club outside Mullen Small, Nebraska, is definitely golf course most natural in America, a bunker transition, large skies and endless grass dunes. Credit: Danita Danita Photo In 1994, rancher Jane Koger from little Green Matfield, Kansas, invited the public to celebrate her birthday with a symphony on her meadow homestead. Nearly 3,000 people attended. A decade later, hopes drummed up awareness and appreciation for Kansas' high grasslands, a handful of county leaders founded Symphony in Flint Hills, Inc., and in 2006, launched its first annual meadow concert. The Symphony in Flint Hills is now a Kansas tradition, attracting nearly 7,000 music and nature lovers alike each year. So far as we know, no modern poet has written about Flint Hills, which is surprising because they are perfectly at peace with his lyre, wrote Jay E. House in the Philadelphia Public Ledger in 1931. In their physical characteristics, they reflect want and despair. Pair that with the harmonies of an orchestra, and you're well on your way to the ideal steppe. Few people think skyscrapers, perhaps because only one of his designs came to life.Commissioned in the early 50s by Harold Price for his oil pipeline company headquarters, the 19-storey Price Tower in downtown Bartlesville, Oklahoma. The building has been refurbished to accommodate a small hotel, a rooftop lounge with stunning views of the city and a growing gallery of modern art, textiles, furniture and design. Guests can also visit the restored executive office. C H.. Prices on the 19th floor. She has written about her life on the farm, cooking, home education, and more. The blog blew up. Drummond is now a New York Times bestselling author and host of her own show, The Pioneer Woman, on The Food Network.And late last year, Drummond and her husband opened The Mercantile, a destination bakery, deli, and general store in the heart of Osage County, Oklahoma, according to the website. Housed in a refurbished century building in downtown Pawhuska, The Mercantile offers freshly brewed coffee, bread items and home-cooked meals.Deli. If you're in Pawhuska, you really can't miss it. This is the brightest and newest building in this small town of Oklahoma. Credit: Courtesy of The Cowboy National & Western Heritage Museum we're all devoted to a life in the saddle, but at the Cowboy & Western National Heritage Museum in Oklahoma City, visitors can spend a day living vicariously through who has been and remains. With world-class performances on cowboy equipment, rodeos, Native American art and galleries filled with classic and contemporary Western art - including works by Frederick Remington and Charles M. Russell - NCWHM opens you to the dusty trails of past cowboys. There's no party like a star party, especially when you're under some of the darkest night skies in the lower 48.Bundle, turn off that phone and don't forget to book in advance. Despite the remoteness of western Texas, the star party was a hit. And if you're looking for an overnight stay, the nearby Indian Lodge, a full-service hotel in Davis Mountains State Park, boasts amazing views and rustic, walled charm. Charm.
