The majority of the items in the list are officially recognized symbols of the U.S. Commonwealth of Virginia. The majority of the items in the list are officially recognized symbols created by an act of the Virginia General Assembly and signed into law by the governor. The state nickname, The Old Dominion, is the oldest symbol.

However, it is the only symbol that is not official. The other nickname, Mother of Presidents, is also historic, as eight Virginians have served as President of the United States, including four of the first five: George Washington, Thomas Jefferson, James Monroe, William Henry Harrison, John Tyler, Zachary Taylor, and Woodrow Wilson. In addition, Sam Houston, President of the Republic of Texas, Fulwar Skipwith, the President of Liberia were from Virginia is one of only two states (the other being Mississippi with the Magnolia) to have the same plant for the state flower and state tree, the flowering dogwood. [1] The majority of the symbols were made official in the late 20th century. Various Type Symbol Year Image Flag State seal on a blue background. Defined as: The flag of the Commonwealth is then made of bunting or merino. It must be a deep blue field, with a circular white center of the same material. On this circle will be painted or embroidered, to show on both sides alike, the coat of arms of the Commonwealth, as described in § 7.1-26 in front of the great seal of the Commonwealth, and there will be a white silk fringe on the outer edge, farthest from the flagstaff. Recovered from American dogwood was designated the Virginia State Flower in 1918. The selection was influenced by the association of the Commonwealth with one of America's most famous founding fathers and presidents. Thomas Jefferson loved trees and grew more than 160 species on the grounds of his Virginia estate, Monticello. He kept detailed records of his gardens and referred to the dogwood tree as early as 1771. In the late 1780s, while he was Minister of France, Thomas Jefferson presented the seeds of North American trees to his associates in Europe. He made several loads of dogwood seeds to a friend in Paris, Madame de Tessé. His enthusiasm for trees lasted a lifetime. Shortly before his death at the age of eighty-three, Thomas Jefferson designed an arboretum for the University of Virginia. Flowering dogwood is one of the most popular trees for ornamental cultivation in the United States. Dogwood trees are also very valuable for wild animals, which swallow the seeds, fruits, flowers, twigs, bark, and leaves of the plant. The fruits are especially popular with birds. They are also a high-fat food source for mammals, including bears, beavers, chipmunks, vossen, konijnen, stinkdieren en eekhoorns.
