U.S. legal case Enumclaw horse sex caseDateJuly 2, 2005LocationUnincorporated King County, Washington, United States (near Enumclaw)TypeZoophilicCauseAcute peritonitis caused by traumatic holes from the colonParticipantsKenneth Pinyan (Mr. Hands),[1] James Michael Tait, an unidentified man, and a stallionDeaths1 (Kenneth Pinyan) The Enumclaw horses sex case was a series of incidents in 2005 involving Kenneth Pinyan,[2] an engineer who worked for Boeing and lived in Gig Harbor. , Washington; James Michael Tait, a truck driver; and other unidentified men. Pinyan and Tait filmed and distributed zoophilic pornography from Pinyan receiving sex from a stallion under the alias Mr. Hands. [4] After being involved in this activity on several occasions over an undisclosed duration of time, Pinyan received fatal internal injuries in one such incident. The story was reported in The Seattle Times and was one of that paper's most-read stories of 2005. [5] It was informally referred to as the Enumclaw horse sex case. [6] Pinyan's death quickly prompted the passing of a bill in Washington that prohibits both sex with animals and the video use of such an act. Under current Washington law, bestyality is now a Class C felony punishable by up to five years in prison. [7] Background In the 1970s, many statutes that criminalized certain sex acts in several U.S. states were revoked, largely because they criminalized consensual sex acts between adults who were no longer considered appropriate to ban (e.g., criminalizing all oral and sex). [8] In Washington state, a law was repealed on July 1, 1976, which said: Every person who must know carnally in any way any animal or bird, or who must know carnally any male or female person by the anus or with the mouth or tongue; or who will voluntarily submit to such knowledge; or who will try sexual intercourse with a dead body shall be guilty of sodomy...— 9.79.100 of the 1974 Revised Code of Washington[10] An effect of the recall was that bestiality became legal in the state of Washington. Kenneth Pinyan spent eight years working for Boeing. [2] He was previously married to a woman and had children with her. He moved from Seattle to Oak Harbor, Washington. [11] Pinyan built a new house and a barn in which he planned to hold a horse, along the Key Peninsula Highway in Gig Harbor, Washington. He was about to start making payments on the property's mortgage. [2] Pinyan had previously lost the ability to experience certain sensations after a motorcycle accident, and he began looking for increasingly extreme sexual acts – such as inserting extremely large dildos, fist into the vagina and receptive anal sex with horses. In the early 2000s, he became a group of men found, nicknamed zoos, which began meeting at a farm in an unincorporated area in King County, Washington, for Weekends: they filmed each other being anally penetrated by horses, and sometimes engaged in sex with each other afterwards (which was also filmed). It was all posted online later. According to Charles Mudede, co-author of the 2007 documentary film Zoo, the men trained the horses to penetrate them by stripping, applying an equestrian breeding pheromone and bending over. [1] In 2015, Mudede wrote that the men had a sexual fixation on large penises that might have had nothing to do with horses. [1] He also believed Pinyan did not truly love horses and was not a true zoo.[1] although Pinyan had a cast of the penis of his favorite horse, Strut. [12] Pinyan's death the incident that killed Pinyan occurred on a 40-acre (16 ha), [14] located in an unincorporated area in King County, Washington,[15] five miles northwest of the city of Enumclaw. [14] Sgt. John Urquhart of the Sheriff's Office said that typically, men had sex with a horse on the property of James Michael Tait, a truck driver who lived in a trailer next to the farm, but on this particular night it is my understanding that horse was not particularly receptive. [16] So snuck Pinyan, Tait, and a third unidentified man that night in the barn of the Southeast 444th Street Farm. The men would often visit that farm for sexual purposes. Either Pinyan or the unidentified man recorded Tait being anally penetrated by a stallion known as Big Dick. After finishing, Tait then filmed Pinyan being anally penetrated by the same horse. During this incident, Pinyan suffered internal injuries, including a perforated colon. [2] On July 2, 2005, an unidentified man dropped off Pinyan at Enumclaw Community Hospital. [14] Medical staff wheeled Pinyan into an exam room before realizing he was dead. [14] According to the Medical Examiner's Office, Pinyan, 45, he died of acute peritonitis as a result of the holes of the colon,[14] and death was ruled accidental. After Pinyan died, the authorities used his driver's license to find acquaintances and relatives. Earlier news reports said that the authorities used surveillance camera footage to track down Pinyan's companion. Using the contacts, the authorities found the farm where the incident occurred. Police tracked the rural Enumclaw-area farm, which was known in zoo chat rooms as a destination for people wanting sex with livestock, and seized 100 VHS tapes and DVDs, amounting to hundreds of hours of video of men involved in bestiality. One of the video recordings featured Kenneth Pinyan shortly before he died July 2. [16] Prosecutors later determined that the horse was not injured. [15] It was only after Pinyan died, when law enforcement went one way to punish his associates, that the legality of bestition in Washington State has become an issue [...] The prosecutor's wanted to inflict Tait with animal abuse, but police found no evidence of abused animals on the many video recordings they collected from his home. Since there was no law against humanely fucking a horse, the prosecutors could charge Tait with trespassing only.— Charles Mudede, The Stranger[2] The prosecutor's office says no animal preparedness charges have been filed because there was no evidence of injuries to the horses.— Associated Press in The Seattle Times[20] Media that included Jennifer Sullivan. , said that originally the King County Sheriff's Department didn't expect the newspaper because it was too gruesome. After an Associated Press report said that the farm where the event took place attracted a significant number of people who wanted to participate in bestiality, the Seattle Times decided that it should write articles about the case as several people were involved. [21] Criminal charges, guilty plea and sentencing The videographer, 54-year-old James Michael Tait,[15] was charged with criminal trespass in the first degree — the owners of the farm, a third party, were not aware that the men had entered the property to become involved in bestiality. The third man was not charged as he was not visible in the videos seized by investigators. [2] On 29 November 2005, Tait made an Alford plea, which is a form of guilty plea in which the accused maintains that they are factually innocent, but acknowledges that the evidence is likely to lead to conviction and therefore accepts that they are convicted. [22] Judge David Christie gave him a suspended one-year sentence, a $300 fine and one day of community service, and ordered Tait never to visit the farm again. [2] Aftermath Mudede wrote that the residents of Enumclaw were shocked and angry about the event at the time of the incident. In 2015, ten years after the incident, Mudede wrote that Enumclaw residents were unwilling to admit it. [11] 2 Guys 1 Horse After Pinyan's death circulated a video on the internet of Kenneth Pinyan engaged in receptive intercourse with a horse. The video was nicknamed Mr. Hands of 2 Guys 1 Horse. The video, originally intended to sexually appease the viewer, became one of the first viral response videos. This video is in the documentary Zoo. [23] On his podcast The Joe Rogan Experience, Joe Rogan showed the video to two guests, Iliza Shlesinger and Josh Zepps, on two separate episodes. [25] Kevin and Keith Hodge, aka the Hodgetwins, did a response to 2 Guys 1 Horse. [27] Zoo main article: Zoo (2007 film) A documentary of the life and death of Pinyan, and the lives led by those who went to the farm Enumclaw came, debuted at the 2007 Sundance Film Festival under the title Zoo. It was one of 16 winners out of 856 candidates for the festival,[28] and played at numerous regional festivals in the US. Played. After Sundance, it was also selected as one of the top five American films presented at the prestigious Directors Fortnight sidebar at the 2007 Cannes Film Festival. [30] James Michael Tait and later events from 2009–2010 some time after the events in Washington, James Michael Tait moved to Maury County, Tennessee, on a farm owned by a man named Kenny Thomason housing horses, pigs, goats and dogs. On October 13, 2009, a woman associated with them, Christy D. Morris, was arrested and charged with three counts of animal rescue. [32] Two days later, an anonymous person sent investigators a picture of a man having sex with a Shetland pony from Thomason's farm; Tait and Thomason were arrested the same day. Tait was charged with three counts of felony animal rescue, while Thomason was charged with two. According to Tait's arrest warrant, he went into sex acts with a stud horse over a span of several months. Tait and Thomason admitted to engaging in sex acts with a horse. [32] In January 2010, Tait pleaded guilty in a Tennessee court to engaging in sexual acts with animals, and was put on probation. [35] Section 16.52.205 of the Revised Code of Washington After Pinyan died,[2] Washington State Senator Pam Roach of Auburn made a bill to ban bestidity in Washington State. [21] Senate Bill 6417, which made the bestiality a Class C felony, passed on February 11, 2006, with 36 state senators voting in favor. The voting record was passed; yes, 36; nays, 0; absent, 0; excuse, 13, meaning that 13 of 49 total senators refrained from going on record on the matter. Mud wrote: It was an almost comically easy law to pass. [2] Bestynality had no political support in the state, and no group in the state advocated for bestidity. [2] Mudede said that reading RCW 16.52.205 is much like reading hardcore porn. [2] In addition, the law prohibits video relapse[ing] a person engaged in a sexual act or sexual contact with an animal who is either alive or dead. Because of the provision against video buying, Mudede said that the law points an angry finger directly at James Tait. [2] In 2015, Mudede said that he had been unaware of any bestiality arrests in Washington since the Pinyan incident.
