

Luxord real name 2019

She insults Vexen incessantly after he is threatened with accusations of treason and incompetence of Marluxia, although this may be linked to his personal dislike for man, and toys with Sora before fighting him for the first time. Giant Bomb Users. Larxene is a powerful user of thunder magic, able to take down multiple attacks or a single lightning strike on the battlefield and can empower your knives with lightning to increase your power when played along with also able to have them lightning beams, as well as to perform levitation and local teleportation. Especially some time after being re-assigned to Oblivion Castle, Larxene and Marluxia act in their scheme to overthrow the Organization, this time aided by Instrumental in his plan was a witch named Naminé, a Nobody who could manipulate the memories of others. In what may be a connection, written in one of many when she becomes a Seeker of Darkness, Larxene seems increasingly sarcastic to her enemies, though her temper has not changed significantly; however, she is still so sharp and rude in her meetings with other members of Larxene wears the Organization's normal black coat and gloves, but her black boots are more feminine and are high heels. Originally appearing in the title Kingdom Hearts: Chain of Memories for the Gameboy Advance, Larxene the Savage Nymph is the twelfth and only female member of the Nobodies Organization and is one of the antagonists of this series. This suggests that her life before turning into darkness was anything but happy, though it might well be deceit on her part. She's really lovely rsrsrs. Larxene was sent to Larxene, although Larxene is usually smiling at the game, she can be undoubtedly cold, ruthless and indifferent, and seems to love nothing more than taking down other people. This brings up the question of whether she really is what she presented herself to be all the time, or if there is more to her. Give a heart to Charity Kingdom Hearts. You look charming today. She doesn't have a real name. Which means we're going to have a name, too. Shortly after joining, she met Axel and engaged in a conversation with him. However, she still uses some thunder magic, the strongest of which is a rotating wall of ball lightning similar to Larxene's Final Limit, throws larxene around the field while encased in lightning, making it even faster. Before making her withdrawal, she hands the hero the cards that give her access to the highest levels of the castle, urging him to do so further up with a verbal cocktail of mockery and insults. Ultimately, however, Larxene and Marluxia's plan to seem to take power is thwarted. At first, Larxene confronts him and sets in motion the false memories that Naminé planted inside him, making him believe Naminé was a childhood friend of his. Or something completely stupid that Nomura took from his ass, like Rlerae (pronounced Releray). -Sparx401Luxord and Demyx. five years later and I'm still not sorry. Hello Luxord. I need more context, but this is totally Larxene. I'm not sure. When asked who it was, she replied: None of her beeswax. Dr. Lou and Y.E.M.MD. She encounters Larxene later walks with the rest of the Organization as they confront the Guardians at the crossroads of keyblade Cemetery. So his name must be Dr. Lou (pronounced Durr Lou). At this point, Larxene confronts Sora directly, revealing that Naminé is being held hostage in the castle, and violently attacks him, revealing a lucky charm that Naminé apparently gave him years ago, motivating him to remember his name. Real name larxeni Have never seen a person as disturbed by a grammatical error like this. His plot fell apart, Larxene reveals the nature of Naminé and the Replica of Riku to Sora before intending to kill him to cut off his losses. In his appearance in A recreation of data of Larxene can be fought during the EVENT NEW Organization XIII in the month of December. After she discovers Axel's unexpected betrayal and sees that Marluxia's plans and plans have failed, while negatively affected and almost seemingly disappointed to talk about it, her friendly manner disappears and she attacks Sora in anger. The re-completed Elrena accepted Xehanort's offer to become one of the Larxene, wearing her hood to hide her identity, appears alongside the other Thirteen Dark Seekers in Larxene returns with the other members of the true Organization who were of the present. Luxord, the Player of Destiny ()[1] is The Organization XIII's Post X, and Post V of the real Organization XIII. He's in command of Gambler Nobodies. During Roxas' time with Organization XIII, Luxord would accompany him during missions in Wonderland, as well as a lounge in the Gray Area of the Castle That Has Never Been with several other members of the Organization. Along with the rest of Organization XIII, Luxord also appears as a playable character in Mission Mode in Kingdom Hearts 358/2 Days. As Sora continued his search for the Fortress of Organization XIII, Luxord beset him and his friends in Port Royal, playing a game with them involving the cursed Aztec treasure. He later fought Sora alone in The World That Never Was, and was the tenth member of Organization XIII to fall. Some time after its destruction, Luxord was brought back to serve as a member of the true Organization XIII, and was tasked with retrieving a mysterious Black Box for the Organization, although he was unsuccessful in his searches. He would later participate in the Keyblade War, and disappear again after his defeat. Lucky personality is like that. An opportunity window can open and close blinking. It is whether or not you can take the chance when it arises that determines a man's fate. Lucky describing luck to Roxas Luxord Luxord a man of games and luck; His challenge to Sora and Jack to find the medallions has a quality of play for him, and the Heartless he invokes cannot be attacked unless all the coins are in the chest, giving a side objective to the battle. He also uses gambling in his own battle with Sora. However, your gaming pleasure can backfire, both in and out of battle. His enjoyment of games is further depicted in his additional scenes in Kingdom Hearts II Final Mix, which show him in an almost indifferent light - he seems not to be bothered as long as he can continue to play and see interesting things. In Kingdom Hearts 358/2 Days, much of Luxord's dialogue references cards, games and luck. Luxord is also portrayed as a master of rhetoric, with an advanced vocabulary (for example, describing the Grim Heartless Reaper as a true maelstrom of avarice, which means infinitely greedy, using it to insult his opponents). He also has a remarkably British accent in english translation, promoting his air of sophistication. Another interesting note is that, unlike most other members of Organization XIII, who play with Sora somehow before fighting, when Luxord appears to him he smiles calmlv and savs I prefer to skip the formalities, and the battle begins immediately. This contrasts somewhat his appearance in Kingdom Hearts 358/2 Days, where he talks a good deal with Roxas in his missions, supposedly because he gets along with him. This brings more meaning to your last words after being fatally struck by Sora How could you, Roxas? In Kingdom Hearts III, Luxord's loyalty to the Organization appears to be out of royal loyalty, contrasting this with Vexen's apparent loyalty to Xemnas. He doesn't seem to like being used as a pawn, sarcastically commenting with Xemnas about being placed at the bottom of the Organization's ranking. After being defeated, Luxord calmly accepts his death and praises Sora for his magnificent card game talents, smiling as Sora plays with him again after he is revived, saying he would very much like it. He even gives Sora a wildcard that he said could turn the tables, which seems to indicate that Luxord knows the price Sora will have to pay for improperly using the power to wake up. Luxord also acknowledges that he has a tendency to look at the minds of people around him and has shown strong deductive reasoning skills. In his conversation with Xigbar about his mission to find the Black Box, Luxord appeared to see through Xigbar's motives based on the evidence he gathered. However, he seemed to have no motive other than to satisfy his curiosity, he said he was fine playing along. Luxord Physical Appearance wears the usual black costume of de limbs, but his robe is a little different from normal, sporting slightly pointed shoulders and very loose sleeves. Luxord's platinum blonde hair is very short and worn in a Caesar cut, and he has electric-blue eyes. although they become golden yellow when he gains a fragment of Master Xehanort's heart. He is also the only member of the original Organization XIII to have a beard or moustache, being a goatee and the same blonde color as his hair. Luxord wears five silver piercings on his ears; four helix piercings in the form of two rings on each ear and a symbol-shaped piercing no one hanging from an ear lobe. The last piercing hangs from his left ear in the game and his right in some works of art, indicating that both ears are pierced. Story Kingdom Hearts Union  $\chi$  A luxord data re-creation can be halted during Event XIII of the New Organization in October. Kingdom Hearts 358/2 Days Luxord and Roxas battling a Heartless in Wonderland. Luxord plays a minor role in Kingdom Hearts 358/2 Days. He is present when Xion joined Organization XIII, and often joins Roxas on missions in Wonderland. This association with this world is more than likely thanks to the Queen of Hearts' army of cards. Luxord takes all of his missions as a game, and tends to comment on them as such to Roxas. He seems shocked when Xemnas announces at an Organization meeting the truth about Xion being a replica, and notes: If only the whispers at the top taken to the bottom... before disappearing from Where Nothing Gathers. If Roxas talks to him before leaving on his mission, he notes that No game is complete without pawns, seemingly resigned to his own role as a pawn in the Organization. Kingdom Hearts II Luxord appears with all other remaining members of the Organization in the confrontation with Sora at Hollow Bastion and is left and left of Saïx. He doesn't make contact with Sora. Luxord holding his cards. Immediately after taunting Sora, the Organization returns to its meeting chamber. In response to the conversation about Sora, Luxord wonders if he would like a hand to determine his fate. This inadvertently instigates a little argument between Xigbar and Demyx, and after Xaldin parting, Luxord disappointingly comments Well, I suppose the fun will have to wait. Shortly after the Battle of the Heartless 1000 and Demvx's death, the five remaining members of Organization XIII gather at Where Nothing Gathers. When Saïx explains that Sora knows of his plans. Xigbar reaffirms that Sora cannot help save the people of the Heartless, to which Luxord adds that the data has been released, and that Sora cannot prevent events that are already underway. Although says that nothing is set in stone and that he would share the fate of demyx if the the not being in his favor, Luxord notes that the fun in betting is not knowing, asking what the point would be if they already knew the result. After making second rounds to the worlds in search of the stronghold of Organization XIII. Sora once again colludes with Jack Sparrow at Port Royal, where he discovers that Will Turner has disappeared while investigating the theft of the cursed Aztec gold by a man in a black coat. They search for Will in the Black Pearl and find him at the Interceptor. Luxord appears in the Black Pearl after they recovered Will, with the cursed gold by his side, greeting Sora, Jack and the others by pulling the hood of his black coat to reveal his face. He reveals that he is in Port Royal to assess the value of the cursed gold for the Organization and summons the Dark Reaper, a Heartless is thrown overboard, Luxord invokes parley's right before Jack can get out of a shot with his pistol. He agrees to hand over his chest, but takes four medallions from him when he does, sending them to his Nobodies Players, who escape with them. This has the effect of returning the curse to the Dark Reaper, who also becomes cursed. Luxord observes the destruction of the Interceptor. The Dark Reaper then beats Sora, Donald, Goofy and Jack on the Interceptor, and Luxord has the black pearl cannons destroy the ship. Sora and the others survive and track the medallions, after which they go to Port Royal and defeat the Dark Reaper, raising the curse on Jack. Even with Luxord's experiments having failed, he manages to bring the heart that the Dark Reaper was holding for Kingdom Hearts, and promptly flees, but not before congratulating Sora. Luxord is again seen shortly before Sora entered the World That Never Was, discussing Axel with the remaining members. He notes that Axel may have gained something by putting his life at risk to help Sora. When Xigbar retorts that, like Nobodies, they have no life to put at risk, Luxord replies: So maybe he'll bet his INCOM. Anyway, he came out the winner. He then adds with a smile: Oh, Axel. A con man to the end. Luxord appears once again in the fortress of Organization XIII in the World That Never Was. When Sora, Kairi, Riku, Donald and Goofy enter the area where Luxord waits, Sora walks ahead of the rest. Materializing between Sora and her friends, Luxord uses his cards to remove Sora's allies from the area, and challenges Sora to a time-encased game. Luxord disappears after his defeat. Luxord fights Sora, using a variety of tricks and lucky games with his playing cards, but in the end, Sora is able to use Luxord's time down and defeat him. While Sora reads a final blow, Luxord raises his cards to protect himself, but Sora cuts the cards and finishes Your last words are Like How You... Purple? before disappearing, making him the tenth member of Organization XIII to fall. Kingdom Hearts 3D: Dream Drop Distance Some time after the destruction of Luxord and his heartless counterpart, Luxord's full self was able to retire. However, he was soon approached by Young Xehanort, who tried to recruit him to the real Organization XIII. Luxord's self-self agreed to join and was subsequently turned back into his Luxord Auto Nobody, where he would become a vessel for a fragment of Master Xehanort's heart. Luxord appears hooded alongside the other members of the real Organization in Where Nothing Gathers before he and the others are forced to temporarily retire due to their time allocated running out. Kingdom Hearts III Luxord interrogates Xigbar. As Xigbar finishes observing Pete and Maleficent's search for the Black Box in Olympus, Luxord appears behind him, observing a riddle involving a black goat hiding a letter and charging a white goat to look for it, using the puzzle as an example to guess aimlessly where the Black Box was with so many possibilities. Xigbar scolds Luxord for doing his job, to which Luxord calmly observes about him always following orders from superiors, all while observing his opponent's strategies before asking whether the order to look for the Black Box came from Xehanort, Luxord concludes that it was Xemnas, or rather the one who issued him the order in the first place: Xigbar himself. When Xigbar denies this and says it was in fact Xemnas, Luxord proves that he was wrong after revealing that he directly asked Xemnas, to Xigbar's intentions, although Xigbar tries to lie out of the matter, claiming that the Black Box contained Keyblade wielder's vital secrets, noting that he can't remember where he heard this information as a result of his many trips. Luxord, however, remains skeptical about the sudden importance of the Black Box and its true identity, as he believes he wants to protect it in order to remove any connections to it with it. Although Xigbar gives no answer after picking up the card other than an angry look, Luxord walks away, noting that it doesn't matter to him as he explained that he was happy to be silent before coming across. After he leaves, Xigbar throws the card aside and asks aloud who Luxord himself was. Luxord questions Xemnas. At the Organization's meeting point at keyblade Cemetery, while Xemnas explained the reasoning for selecting numbers nine to twelve in the original Organization XIII, Luxord appears at the top of one of the stone. pillars, questioning whether his roles rot on the lower step. To Larxene's frustration, she comments on whether this was Rehash, Luxord explains that he had an important role to play, noting that he was not on the bench unlike Demyx, much to the latter's disappointment over listening to the former. Larxene asks if her role involved the mysterious Black Box that Xigbar had mentioned to them, although Luxord directs his attention to Xemnas, guestioning him about the reasoning for his reassembly beyond the good of the old days. Xemnas reveals that he, along with Demyx, Larxene and Marluxia, would reveal keyblade's ancient legacy that sleeps inside them, to his surprise. Luxord soon travels to the Caribbean with Vexen in search of the Black Box. While Vexen seeks to claim the box for research, Luxord reminds him that his intentions were only to protect the box. The two soon talk about vexen's importance and role in the Organization, as well as their contributions to the improvement of the Replica Program. At one point, Vexen questioned whether Luxord's words suggested treason, although Luxord denied this, stating that he serves the Organization. contrary to Vexen's need to appease Xemnas. Finishing their conversation. Luxord tells Vexen to stav out of his way as he searches for the Black Box, which the latter fulfills before taking his leave, but not before telling Luxord that he would be watching from the shadows. Luxord parleys with Sora and company in the Caribbean. Soon after Sora and company acquire the Leviathan, they are soon caught in a mysterious mist. As they look around, a larger ship with the symbol No One in its sails appears directly next to them. After closer inspection, they see a hooded figure in a black coat that takes care of the ship, who soon pulls his hood to reveal himself as Luxord, who declares salsa, much to Jack's annoyance. Boarding the Leviathan, Luxord reveals to the group that he is indeed back inside the Organization, telling them never to count their letters until they have all been traded. Although Sora tries to convince Jack not to participate in parley, Jack assures them that it is part of the pirate code and that they should not be harmed during the rules. Jack then guestions what he wanted, to which Luxord reveals that he is looking for a box, a chest, perhaps. When asked by Luxord if he knows what he is talking about, Jack denies to some extent, saying he knows of a particular box that should not be confused. Intrigued, Luxord then asks for a bet, for which Jack asks what her nature would be. Luxord challenges the pirates to a race to Port Roval, saving that if he wins, they would tell him all about the box, or rather, if they won, Luxord would reward Jack whatever he wanted. Jack agrees to participate in the bet, to Sora's surprise, and Luxord soon deforms. for his exclaiming to the pirates to begin with. As the pirates approached Port Royal in the lead, Luxord summons a heartless fleet to fire on the pirates board the ruined ship, where they encounter Luxord, who summons a group of Heartless and No One to fight them. After cleaning Luxord's ship, Luxord appears before the group, congratulating them on their victory, to Sora's suspicions. When Jack admires the acceptance of Luxord's defeat, Luxord asks what he wanted as a reward for his victory; Jack reveals that he wants the Dead Man's Chest aboard the Flying Dutchman, although the pirates soon realize they were tricked into revealing the location of the chest to Luxord. When confronted about it, Luxord tells them that instead of decising them, he simply tricked them, saying that he was always more interested in playing the long game before deforming. A heartless group soon knocked the pirates back to the Leviathan as Luxord's ship disappears. Luxord sora forewarns. Once the pirates are able to restore the Leviathan at Port Royal, they find Luxord's repaired ship in the fog as they approached Shipwreck Cove. As Sora calls the name Luxord, the latter tells them from his ship that they know how to make a good time, saying that his speed should be amazed. However, Luxord tells Sora that his compulsive behavior would eventually bring him grief before summoning more heartless ships for them to deal with before disappearing into the fog with his ship. While the flying Dutchman and the Black Pearl engage in a battle around a whirlwind, Luxord appears on Sora's ship, where he identifies the Flying Dutchman. When Sora explains that the chest aboard the Flying Dutchman housed Davy Jones' heart and that it couldn't be what they were looking for, Luxord reveals that no one knows the contents of the box he was looking for. When asked by Sora how he would find it, Luxord admits that the Organization's superiors did not inform the other members of the mysterious contents of the box, only to contain hope. In order to board the Flying Dutchman, Luxord summons the Kraken to deal with the pirates. Once Jack has recovered the Dead Man's Chest, Luxord intercepts him and tries to negotiate with Parley, although he is interrupted by Jack before he can. When Jack says he has what he needs, he blows a breath of his rancid breath into Luxord's face, causing the No Man to stumble on the side of the ship and into the ocean in disgust. Luxord rewards Sora with a wildcard. Luxord later walks alongside the other hooded members of the Organization to confront the guardians of light at the crossroads of keyblade Cemetery, where the Master creates the Skein of Severance to serve as the battlefields of the Keyblade War. Luxord soon alongside Larxene, Marluxia and Xemnas on the Valley Trail against King Mickey and Sora. During the battle, Xemnas empowers Luxord, who soon uses his new force to trap Mickey on a card while challenging Sora to one last game. Unfortunately for Luxord, Sora is once again able to beat him. After his defeat, Luxord praises Sora for his talents and rewards him for a wildcard, telling him to hold him as it could turn the game around. Sora tells Luxord that he would touch it again one day when they are just guys; Luxord laughs, saying he would love this before disappearing once again, becoming the third member of the real Organization to be eliminated. Kingdom Hearts III Re Mind A year after Master Xehanort's defeat and Sora's disappearance, a data recreation of Luxord, along with the rest of the real Organization XIII, is fought by a digital copy of Sora with the hope of discovering Sora's actual location from the encrypted data they possessed. After defeating all thirteen data recreations, however, the results proved inconclusive. Luxord skills use his attribute, time, in unorthodox methods when compared to other members of the XIII Organization. He is not, in general, the most complicated member of the Organization to defeat. He shortens the chances of originally dispatching Sora's teammates before attacking Sora himself. In Kingdom Hearts II, Luxord does not have a health bar; During the battle, Luxord and Sora have a time bar that runs out over time and when they are damaged. The first to have theirs exhausted loses the battle. This means that the player must observe Sora's HP and time meters to make sure neither is emptied. When fighting, he primarily uses his cards both to defend himself and to attack energy sphere around him to release energy tendons that reach everywhere, also having a variation where he surrounds himself with an energy sphere before suddenly casting his cards around enemies to attack them from all directions. In Kingdom Hearts III, Luxord shows off the ability to teleport Marluxia and Larxene to the field and also bring them out when Sora attacks them. Your data replica and data limitcut both display the ability to increase the time meter by winning a game over Sora, while reducing sora's time meter. In Kingdom Hearts 358/2 Days, Luxord has a Break Limit called jackpot, Luxord summons a card in front of him. As it is summoned, the card alternates between a cross and a flashing symbol similar to Roxas' pendant. Select ing Crossed on the card just exploding and Luxord will visibly falter, while selecting the flashing symbol will create some powerful energy explosions that follow a trail between Luxord and the target. During the final of Luxord Luxord summons two cards in front of him instead of one. The player now has three alternate symbols to choose from: double crosses, the flashing symbol, and an additional red symbols. Crosses cause the cards to explode as before, the flashing symbol and the red symbol create exactly the same bursts of energy as summoning it to a plate. When the two large red symbols are selected, Luxord will create more bursts of energy than with a plate, with the final explosion being much larger and more powerful. Both versions of the attack resemble the Begin Game Reaction Command that Luxord and the Nobodies players shared in Kingdom Hearts II. Luxord's weapons are very flexible, literally and figuratively. He uses cards of varying sizes, some probably reaching more than ten feet in the air when they were at the end. The back of each Chart has five no one symbols on it, while the opposite side resembles a clock (referring to the Luxord time element) that has no one's symbols like minute and hour hands, and roman numerals for 1-12 for the clock). Luxord uses these Cards the way most members of Organization XIII use their element. Your weapon is Fair Game Cards. It can turn into a giant card and hide among similar cards, turn your enemies into Cards, play waves of sharp cards at an enemy, create defensive barriers, and sometimes by will can distort reality. The Flip Reaction Command causes the Cards to disappear, but some of them have a trap (represented by a symbol on one side of the Card) that Flip fires. He can also use them as a hand cover trick, or to disorient his enemies. Their re-creation of limitcut data could telekinetically manipulate the Cards even after playing them, Suspend yourself in the air while shooting Cards, release a multitude of red cards that cannot be blocked, create an energy barrier with five cards that must be broken in the correct order unless Sora be damaged, and his final game has him surrounding Sora on a large amount of Cards where if Sora does not find him in time, he can have all the Surround Cards and launch Sora attack. Strangely, most of the Cards (which have no traps) that Luxord uses in battle are blank on one side, while the ones he uses to trap Sora's companions carry the aforementioned watch design. Gambler Nobodies also uses Cards as his weapons, and has the ability to turn an enemy into a card after winning a game. They also use Dice, and have a similar ability to turn an enemy into a Die. It should also be noted that in Kingdom Hearts 358/2 Days, almost your weapons are named after a card in a deck of tarot cards. The back of Luxord's Fair Game Cards. Add a photo to this Trivia Latin gallery, lux means light. This, combined with his gentle air and kindness to Roxas Roxas Kingdom Hearts 358/2 Days may suggest that Luxord was less inclined to darkness, unlike other members of the Organization. This may be a coincidental reference to your friendly relations with Roxas, whose attribute is Light. Luxor is the name of a famous Egyptian-themed casino in Las Vegas, Nevada. Given Luxord's penchant for gambling, it is possible that he was named after the casino. Although his name has been known since Kingdom Hearts II, his name was not spoken in any of the games until Kingdom Hearts III, where it was revealed to be pronounced similar to Lucas. Before that, most fans assumed that his name was pronounced similar to luck. According to the series' director, Tetsuva Nomura, Luxord is his favorite member of the Organization.
