How to invite friends on minecraft realms

If you would like to invite other players to your realm of minecraft for Mobile, Nintendo Switch, PlayStation 4 & Windows 10, VR, and Xbox One & Series X | S is an easy way you can use our Realms Invite Link feature to easily add more players without individually adding them to your realm. Invite links are custom URLs, unique to your realm, that you can use to invite new members. When someone clicks the invitation link, they'll be prompted to sign in or sign up with their Xbox Live account, then join the realm of the white list immediately. This means that they can jump the world instantly – even if the owner is not online. If it gets a bit crowded, you can cancel the old invite link so no one else can use it – just refresh the link from your Realms member settings. Only the latest version of your invitation link will let you join new players, so it's up to you if you want to share your new link with a new group of friends, or keep it private. When you refresh the invite link, anyone who previously joined will still be a Realm whitelist and able to join the world, but no new player will be able to use that link to access it. Of course, no matter what link they have, other players that you've blocked using Xbox Live will never be able to access your worlds. So now, whether you want to share your Minecraft world with your family, closest friends, or around the world, it's easy to add them to your realm with invite links. Want to know more about Realms? Minecraft Realms is based on private Minecraft servers which you and your friends can play together safely and unfussed with the rest of the Internet. The crucial difference here is that this world exists, whether the author is online or not. Therefore, they are always open to the guest list, and users can pop up, create content or work towards a common goal at any time. You may have heard of Minecraft Realms, and wondered how they work or how to set one up in Minecraft. Coming up we are going to explain just that: exactly what is and how they work, how much they pay, and how to invite friends to enjoy the fun. (Image credit: Mojang Studios) Minecraft there are personal multiplayer servers that allow you to create a world of Minecraft and allow up to ten players of your choice to be online at the pie Time. You can either create a new world, or add to the existing world of realms and new content is available every month, including maps, mini-games, and character skin. Your kingdom will be online 24/7 so anyone that you are invited to join you will be able to play whenever they choose. And because you have complete control over what can play on your kingdom – you can withdraw access at any time – it's a safe place for younger gamers to gather and play with friends without having to worry about who they can interact with. Minecraft Realms is available on your PC, Xbox One, Nintendo Switch and various mobile devices, and you can access your realm from any of them if you're signed in with the same Minecraft account. Crossplay is also enabled, allowing you to invite friends regardless of the platform they play on. The only thing you should take care of what version you have if you play on a PC - Java Edition is not compatible with most devices. Another point to note is that Minecraft Realms currently doesn't support mods, aside from packages that are included in Realms Plus subscriptions (10-player Realms), so if this is something you care about, you may need to look for an alternative. How Much Does Minecraft Realms Cost? (Image credit: Mojang Studios) A monthly subscription by Realms Plus will cost you $7.99/£6.69 for a maximum of 10 players per month. As well as getting your own private, always online multiplayer server, you will also have access to over 50 Marketplace packages that include maps, mini-games, and character skin. If you've never used Minecraft Realms Plus before, you may find you are eligible for a 30-day free trial. Alternatively, if you're looking for something a little smaller, you can choose to build a realm for a maximum of two players for $3.99/£3.29 per month. You'll get the same benefits as your realm, always online, but you won't have access to Marketplace content. There is always an option to cancel later if you feel that you are not getting much use of it. How to create Minecraft Realms (Image credit: Mojang Studios)If you want to start from scratch and create a new world of realms, go ahead and start creating the world the way you want it, with difficulty, fashion (Survival, Creative), along with any other customisations you want to add. Once you are satisfied with your settings, you should look for the Create realms button, just to the right of the default Create option. You will be given the option of 10-player Realm or 2-player Realm. Once you have agreed to the Terms and Deal, you will be able to access your new realm and Marketplace benefits if you immediately chose the 10-player option. Minecraft realms are charged on a month-by-month basis, so if you find that you and your friends don't get as much exercise out of it as you hoped, you can cancel any subscription section of the Microsoft website. How to invite friends to your Minecraft Realm (Image credit: Mojang Studios) The good news is that friends you want to invite to your realm don't need to have a subscription to join and play with you. To invite friends to your kingdom, click the Edit button next to your kingdom world, and then select Members. You should see a list of friends that you are already invited to, and you will be able to invite more. It seems that the number of invitees you can send out is almost unlimited, but people who can play on your realm at the same time will be limited by your subscription type – so either two or ten players at a time. This is also where you'll be able to uninvite players if they've outstayed their welcome or not active for a while. How to change Minecraft Realm settings (Image credit: Mojang Studios)You can change the settings to your current realm world by clicking on the Edit button next to the name of the realm. From there, you can make adjustments such as game mode, difficulty, change the name of the world or add cheats. As a backup or replacement of your world of Minecraft Realms (Image credit: Mojang Studios) you don't have to stick with the same world using Minecraft Realms. If you want to start a whole new world or if you want to replace your current one with another, you can do that too. But you might want to back up your current world before doing so, otherwise you will lose any progress you have on it. To duplicate your existing world of Minecraft realms, click the Edit button next to your realm world and select Download World. This will save the world on your device, and you'll be able to play it locally or re-upload it later if you change your mind. To replace your current world of Minecraft Realms, click again on Edit next to your realm world and select Replace The World. You will then be asked to confirm this action before submitting a list of available names to replace it. Once you have chosen, the new world will be uploaded and you will be ready to go. (Image credit: Mojang Studios) If you have chosen a 10 player subscription for Realms Plus, you should keep an eye out for monthly updates on the official website. New cards, character skins, and mini-games are constantly being added, and as they are available for free with Realms Plus, it seems foolish not to at least check what is on offer.
