Although our vape pens are top-of-the-line, we can't always control the technological issues when it comes to functionality. If you use Ooze pens you will know that there are 5 clicks on, 5 clicks off, 2 clicks to preheat - all illuminate the pen green with each click. But what do you do when the oozing pen flashes green when you don't click it? There are three main reasons why the Ooze pen flashes green. When a battery is dead, when there is a connection problem, or maybe it was damaged on the way from the factory to you. 1. It is dead and needs to be charged The most common reason your Ooze pen can flash green is because the battery is dead and needs to be charged. Start by connecting it to the charger. If the pen lights up green and the charger lights up red, it will confirm the problem: that the pen is dead. When fully charged, the charging light turns green and the pen light turns off, alerting you that the pen is good to walk. When the Ooze battery is dead, it usually flashes green 10-15 times. If a dead battery isn't your problem and your pen is still flashing, you might have a connection problem, which brings us to the second most common reason why the Ooze pen flashes green. 2. There is a connection problem When the battery has a connection problem, the battery will usually flash green 4-5 times. There are two ways to have a connection issue. One is a cartridge leak and two are an irregular-sized cartridge. Due to vaping pens, many cartridges leak. Unfortunately, even the smallest amount of leakage can prevent the cartridge from making a good connection with the battery. Fortunately, there are some tricks to clean it out and fix the connection. Just take a Q Tip dipped in rubbing alcohol, clean where the battery and cartridge meet on both products, and dry them before screwing them back together. Some cartridges are also irregular size, which means they may not be able to screw in completely, or it may feel like it's the right size, but it's just not connecting properly. Sometimes you can solve this problem by simply tightening or loosening the cartridge until you find the sweet spot that provides a good connection. Pro tip: We just buy cartridges from a licensed dispensary (both for safety reasons and the simple fact that you are more likely to get a high quality cartridge) as these irregular carts can cause irreparable damage to the Ooze pen over time. 3. The battery has been permanently damaged If you have tried and ruled out the first two reasons why the pen can flash green and followed our fix-it tips, your pen may be permanently damaged and you probably need a new one. While we are completely behind every vape battery we produce, irregularities during shipping and handling can potentially damage the battery. If it seems that the battery is damaged right out of the box, no worries, that is why we offer a lifetime warranty on all our vape batteries. Just know that if you buy from Ooze, we will always replace a defective battery! If you have any other questions or problems with your Ooze vape pen, please contact our customer service team by sending an email to support@oozelife.com with your order number, or delivery address, full name and description of the issue.
