Basic concept of DAA DAA Explicit Anonymous Testing (1) (2) Blog Direct Anonymous Check (2) DAA is a special remote authentication protocol that exists on a platform with reliable modules. DAA is a signature scheme that is issued by TCG for its standards. Its name comes from: Direct proof - not related to a trusted third party; Anonymous - does not reveal the identity of the signature; Confirmation - proves the statement of TPM. Since DAA is a signature scheme, let's first look at several types of signatures (from the point of view of verification): 1. 1-to-1 signature scheme: That is the usual signature scheme. The verification can determine the attribution of the signature based on the certified public signature key; From 1 to N signature scheme: for example, a ring signature, the signature of the specified checker, a parallel signature, etc. 3. 1-to-one set of subscription schemes: for example, group signatures, DAA, etc. Shazce need a certified group public key. Of course, DAA is a special type of group signature that differs from a group signature has signature traceability and irrefutableness, meaning administrators can identify who the real signatory is based on the signature, while the DAA signature scheme is flexible and relevant because there are no authors in the protocol for identification (e.g. administrators in the group or other trusted third parties), however), however, , daA subscription agreements can provide a mechanism called User controlled anonymity and user-controlled relevance. This mechanism allows multiple established signatories to come to the same signatory to be correlated with the same or more checkers (because it is necessary for some applications, as shown in the picture:). provided by the user, will be discontinued by the server, such as App_3 on Verifier_1, other applications associated with the app will stop simultaneously, such as App_1 on Verifier_2 and App_1 and App_2 on Verifier_3. The method of its specific implementation can be seen in the scenario built by the DAA protocol. 1.1 The objectives of the TCG TCG target architecture are primarily to balance the following aspects: 1. protecting user information; 2. Protect the user's computing environment Ensuring the security arrangements chosen by the user; and 4. Protect the user's privacy. It is clear that privacy and security are fundamentally contradictory in the authentication process, as shown in the picture: い Л.ЧенいコいいいDAAい案.
