Connecting and updating Sojourner Family Peace Center and Children's Hospital of Wisconsin developed a coordinated, central, co-located model of services for families affected by violence in their community, known as the Sojourner Family Peace Center. The 72,000 SF Center houses the sojourner family peace center's programming, including the Sojourner Truth House, which is the organization's 24-hour crisis shelter. It also houses spaces for the Child Protection Center and other Wisconsin child abuse services. This provides a more comprehensive system of services to adults and children who unfortunately have to deal with the effects of domestic violence. The Center is one of the first in the nation to house holistic services to victims of all ages. By combining the services currently provided in three different locations at the new Sojourner Family Peace Centre, the burdens are mitigated for both the victim and the community. This increases the likelihood that the cycle of violence will break and create peace in the community.
