Cast of in the heat of the night tv show

Friday Night Lights is just one of those shows we can't stop recommending, even though it ended over eight years ago. It's also one of those shows that most fans would argue to end far too soon. Although the show revolves around the life of a high school football coach and his players, the show is about more than just football. The show has always focused on the family. Coach Taylor and Tami Taylor were the couple you wanted to be and the parents you wanted. Nearly a decade after the show ended, many of the show's stars have had great success in Hollywood. Here's what some of your favorites are so far. Friday Night Lights | Bill Records/NBCU Photo Bank Kyle Chandler It's only bigger and better for Kyle Chandler since the Friday Night Lights finale. After the show ended in 2011, Chandler appeared in several films such as Zero Dark Thirty, The Spectacular Now and Game Night. The actor's most acclaimed role came in 2015, when Chandler played John Rayburn in the Netflix original series Bloodline. Chandler received two Emmy nominations for the role, which added to his previous two nominations and one win. The Buffalo native currently stars alongside George Clooney in the Hulu series Catch-22, based on the novel of the same name by Joseph Heller. Chandler will also appear with Stranger Things star Millie Bobby Brown in Godzilla vs Kong, due out next year. Connie Britton Mrs. Taylor is also successful after saying goodbye to Dillon, Texas. Immediately after Friday Night Lights, Connie Britton played country singer Rayna Jaymes in the NBC hit Nashville. The actress starred in the series until the end of the series in 2018. During the filming of Nashville, Britton also had a recurring role in American Horror Story, in which she played Vivien Harmon. The Boston native followed Nashville playing 9-1-1 dispatcher Abby Clark for a season on the Fox drama 9-1-1. Britton currently plays as Ally in the Showtime series SMILF. Zach Gilford Zach Gilford played the sweet and hard-working quarterback Matt Saracen. Although Gilford struggled to find the success he had on Friday Night Lights, the actor has had several TV shows over the years. In 2011, Gilford appeared on the ABC show Off the Map. Unfortunately, the show was cancelled after only 13 episodes. The actor was cast in The Mob Doctor in 2012. This show was also cancelled after 13 episodes. In 2016, The Family got only 12 episodes and Lifetime of 2017 only 8. Gilford currently has a recurring role in the NBC comedy Good Girls. He also appeared in four episodes of LA's Finest with Jessica Alba and Gabrielle Union. Taylor Kitsch After losing to battered fullback on Friday Night Lights Riggins, Kitsch began a successful film career. In 2012, Kitsch starred in the Disney film John Carter. He followed with Liam Neeson in Battleship. Battleship reunited Kitsch with Friday Night Lights creator Peter Berg, who directed the film. In 2013 he starred in Lone Survivor alongside Mark Wahlberg. Most recently, Kitsch played in the miniseries Waco. He will be featured in the TV series Shadowplay. Michael B. Jordan Michael B. Jordan joined the cast of Friday Night Lights in 2009. Jordan's star has exploded since landing the role of Vince Howard. The actor starred in several films after leaving the show, but 2015 was the year Jordan would make it big. In 2015, Jordan played Johnny Storm in Fantastic Four. Later that year, the actor caught everyone's attention when he played Adonis Johnson in the Rocky Balboa film Creed. He repeated his role in 2018. 2018 was also the year the actor starred in the HBO film Fahrenheit 451. This year, Jordan received his first Emmy nomination for his role in the HBO film. Jordan has three films on deck – Just Mercy, Without Remorse and Wrong Answer are all in different stages of production. There are some solid shows on TV on Wednesday night (Fox's Empire, TBS' Full Frontal With Samantha Bee), but there are also a handful of not-so-big series pulling the lineup down. These shows - including reality and scripted titles - haven't been able to impress and are simply not on par with the other more worthy choices of the evening. From pointless dating shows like Are You the One? to clichéd melodramas like Star, these eight titles don't do their networks – or us as viewers – any favours. Below, check out some of the worst TV shows that aired on Wednesday night. 1st Star Star | Fox Lee Daniels' Empire was a hit for Fox, but the same cannot be said about his new show, Star. Despite some big names, such as Queen Latifah and Benjamin Bratt, the series is widely used because of its melodramatic plot and its heavy reliance on industry tropes. It was also criticized for lacking the style or fun that made Empire such a hit. Despite the bad reviews, Fox seems to have enough confidence in Daniels to give the show a second chance and renew it for Season 2. 2. Criminal Minds: Beyond Borders Criminal Minds: Beyond Borders | CBS CBS did viewers no favours by lighting this critically panned expansion of the Criminal Minds franchise with green lighting. Beyond Borders' freshman season scored a low 20% on Rotten Tomatoes, with critics criticizing the show not only for relying on the same boring tropes of its predecessors, but also for its chunky worldviews that seem to have fanned the flames of the show. stoked. Despite the problematic storytelling, Beyond Borders is backed by the popular brand to which it is affiliated – a factor that probably prompted CBS to bring the drama back for a second season. 3. Are you the One? Are you the One? | MTV MTV's supplement to the abundance of Reality dating shows are exactly what you would expect – redundant and pointless, but (apparently) popular. The show, which premiered in early 2014, follows 20 single people – 10 men and 10 women - trying to find their perfect mates to take home a million dollars as a group. Having just finished its fifth season, the show has since inspired a spinoff called Are You the One: Second Chances, which will bring back 10 perfect matches from previous seasons. Already lost interest? We too. 4. The Real Housewives of Potomac The Real Housewives of Potomac | Bravo The Potomac branch of the franchise is one of the recent Real Housewives spinoffs and yes, it's as vain as its many predecessors. Like all the other branches before it, the series is filled with a bunch of exaggerated dramas and a cast of privileged women, all of which seem to have far too much time on their hands. In its second season, Potomac is the eighth installment of the Real Housewives phenomenon, which unfortunately shows no signs of leaving any time soon. 5. Schitt's Creek Schitt's Creek | Pop The Pop sitcom, about a wealthy family who loses their fortunes and moves to the small town of Schitt's Creek, may have a clever title, but that seems to be the end of creativity. Critics called the show's gags youthful and at best stale. That, combined with the no-thrills production, makes the comedy largely skipped. 6. Six Six | History The History Channel has made its step into original programming with this army drama describing the operations and daily lives of the members of SEAL Team Six. Unfortunately, the show has received some rather mediocre reviews since its premiere earlier this year. Although the series features some captivating characters and captivating action scenes, it ultimately brings nothing fresh to the table and is too similar to Army Wives and other military shows of the past. 7. Code Black Code Black | CBS This cbs medical drama set in a crowded and understaffed emergency room in Los Angeles is in its second season and hasn't been able to stand out. While the show has a solid cast, the show itself provides a nice addition to the network up. Packed with exaggerated storylines and cumbersome dialogues, Code Black is something of a letdown for anyone looking for a fresher look. 8. Hunted | CBS CBS' reality contest, which premiered in January 2017, features a group of candidates against an army of expert hunters with backgrounds in the FBI, CIA and NSA. The series is billed as the most elaborate hide-and-seek game in the world, but in the first season there were many problems, and viewers have the lack of transparency of the show (the competition does not share its rules with the audience) and strongly staged feeling. Whether it gets a chance to fix these problems in a second season remains to be seen. Check out Entertainment Cheat Sheet on Facebook! When the expression Clear Eyes. Full hearts. Can't be loose. Send yourself into an emotional spiral, then you probably know it's the 13th anniversary of Friday Night Lights. The NBC drama premiered on October 3, 2006 and ran for five seasons. Friday Night Lights Season 1 Cast | Michael Muller/NBC/NBCU Photo Bank via Getty Images As it has had many different stars over the years, we will focus only on those who were billed as lead actors in Season 1 (see photo above). Let's take a look at how far they've all come in their careers. Kyle Chandler Chandler impersonated Coach Eric Taylor, who will be the new football coach of the Dillon High School Panthers. Throughout the series, he leads his team both on and off the field. Chandler has been there for all five seasons. After Friday Night Lights, Chandler starred in films such as The Wolf of Wall Street and Manchester by the Sea. He also starred on television on the Netflix show Bloodline. He is now part of the great Godzilla franchise and played in Catch-22 on Hulu. Connie Britton Britton played Tami Taylor, wife of Coach Taylor and school counselor. Like her husband, she changed jobs at school, and she was always there for the city's teens and young adults. Britton was also on for all five seasons. Britton moved directly from FNL to American Horror Story, in the first season. She then appeared in several seasons of Nashville. Other current series include 9-1-1, SMILF and Dirty John. Britton has several post-production films, including Bombshell, about the Fox News scandal. Aimee Teegarden Teegarden played Julie Taylor in FNL. Julie is the eldest daughter of Tami and Eric and begins to arrange one of the footballers on her father's team. She is considered one of the least liked characters in the series, although she stayed until the end. Like Britton, Teegarden has mostly appeared on television and appeared in shows such as Aim High and Notorious. She also starred in the Netflix series The Ranch. Teegarden is currently working on a number of projects. Taylor Kitsch Kitsch broke out as Tim Riggins in FNL. Riggins is a young athlete who is a little anxious and struggles to reconcile his personal life. Kitsch was part of the show's lead role through Season 4 and returned in Season 5. The actor has done pretty well since the end of the series. He starred in Season 2 of True Detective and the miniseries Waco. Kitsch will be featured in the new thriller series Shadowplay in 2020. Jesse Plemons Plemons portrayed Landry Clarke, the Nerd, who later joins the football team. He played in the first four seasons of the FNL before becoming a guest star in 5. Plemons has erupted in the years since the end of the show as both a comedic actor and a drama star. You may know him from Breaking Bad, Fargo or Black Mirror, but he also made us laugh in Drunk History and Game Night. Plemons has numerous projects in the works, including an upcoming adaptation of The Bell Jar. Minka Kelly Kelly played Lyla Garrity, a cheerleader. She played in the first three seasons of the FNL before she left, and returned as a guest star in Season 4. Kelly had a recurring role in Jason Katims' next series Parenthood. She then appeared in short-lived FERNSEHSERIEs such as Charlie's Angels and Almost Human. Kelly has returned to shows such as The Path and Jane the Virgin. She is currently playing a superhero in the Titans. Zach Gilford Gilford played Matt Saracen, a new recruit with the Dillon Panthers, who has to step up after a tragedy. Gilford was part of the lead role in Season 3, which was repeated in Seasons 4 and 5. The actor has had a number of roles in film and television since the end of FNL, including the short-lived series The Mob Doctor and the film The Purge: Anarchy. He is currently returning to Good Girls and is a regular in L.A.'s Finest. Adriane Palicki Palicki portrayed the evil girl Tyra Collette in FNL. Like many others who were in high school at the start of the series, she left after Season 3 and returned as a guest star in Season 5. You can see Palicki in a number of roles, many of which fall into the action/superhero genre. She was to portray Wonder Woman in a 2011 television series that never came to an end. Palicki also starred in Seasons 2 and 3 of Agents of SHIELD. She currently stars in The Orville. Charles Charles played Brian Smash Williams in the first two seasons of Friday Night Lights. He also returned in Season 3. The show had a serious lack of diversity apart from Charles, which was later slightly changed with the addition of actors such as Michael B. Jordan and Jurnee Smollett. Apart from his role in FNL, you can know Charles as Dr. Shane Ross in Grey's Anatomy. He was only in the medical drama for two seasons. Charles also re-entered Season 1 of God Friended Me, which recently returned for a second season. Scott Porter Porter finally impersonated Jason Street, the team's star quarterback, who suffered life-changing trauma in the first episode. He continued to star in the series through Season 2, returned in Season 3, and returned for a guest appearance in Season 5. Porter, like many of his co-stars, has done pretty well for himself on TELEVISION. He has appeared in shows such as The Good Wife and Scorpion. He also had a leading role in CW drama Hart of Dixie. Porter has a successful career as a voice actor who speaks out characters in numerous video games and TV series. Series. Series.
