The group is the most powerful car we have to carry the message. Basic text, p.68 When we first came to anonymous Narcotics meetings, we encountered recovering addicts. We know they are addicts because they talk about the same experiences and feelings we've had. We know they're recovering because of their serenity – they've got something we want. We feel hopeful when other addicts share their recovery with us at na meetings. The atmosphere of recovery attracts us to the meetings. This atmosphere is created when group members make a commitment to work together. We try to ameroma the atmosphere of recovery in helping set up for meetings, salute newcomers, and talk to other addicts after the meeting. These demonstrations are committed to attracting our meetings and helping our groups share their healing. Sharing experiences of meetings is one way in which we help one another, and it's often the foundation for our sense of concrete. We identify with other adjudicates, trusting the messages of hope. Many of us wouldn't be living in Anonymous Narcotics without this sense of desert and hopeful. As we share in group meetings, we support our personal recovery as we help others. Just for today: I will reach out to another addict in my group and share my recovery. Copyright (c) 2007-2020, NA World Service, Inc. All Rights
