A little information about Kroger In 1883, Barney Kroger used all his lifelong savings to open his own grocery store. Although his entire future depended on the success of his new company, he refused to allow any quality drop just to make a quick sale. I really believed that anyone who entered Kroger's should be so satisfied with their shopping experience that they become a repeat customer that they are always happy with their in-store purchases and experience. Barney Kroger made sure all his employees didn't sell any products they wouldn't be willing to buy themselves. Dedication to high quality remains a hallmark of Kroger stores to this day and is especially evident in the store's bakery departments. In the 1930s, Kroger became the first store to monitor product quality and apply quality control techniques. From a manufacturing point of view, Kroger branched into dairy, grocery items, meat plants and, of course, bakeries. Today, we all know and love Kroger bakery cakes.
