In the text Citation Structure (Last Name) Example (Holmes) When you need to compose an average research book or a simple essay, you need to use certain resources to support the statement. Even when you talk about common knowledge, it is still important to mention the source to avoid the risk of plagiarism. Besides, this shows that you've done some research. Citing the MLA style encyclopedia is one of those reliable methods that will make your essay much better and keep it within academic writing standards. Our guide to citation mla offers a list of examples that will serve as a good starting point. He currently scores 8, the most widespread writing styles among American students. Here's how to do it right and list what you need to include:– Author of the article. According to the MLA encyclopaedia manual, the name of the last author should be used with the full name, including the middle name. It is recommended to avoid giving a initial. - Title and subtitle of the selected entry. It's separated by the column. The first and last words of the title and subtitle must be capitalized. The same applies to all relevant surnames and words that have a certain meaning. As a rule, the title and subtitle must be quotation marks. – Encyclopaedia title (and subtitle, if available). Here the same rules apply as they were made above. The title of the encyclopedia should be lying down. There are no quotation marks in this reference. – Full name(s) of editor(s). It's the pre-prena sings Edited by John Smith or Edited by Jake Russell, Tony Lindstrom and John Baker. Note that there is a branch at the end. Issue number. As an example: 3. It is a template vol. 3. - Publisher. A comma must be installed after the publisher name. – Year of publication. – Database (if applicable). MedLab Inc., Goes in lying with commas at the end. - The URL of the website. It doesn't have a prefix, just a URL. – Date of access. The format is: Available 1. 2019.
