Last update: February 2020 date since the ban was lifted, West Virginia was open to licensed distilleries, but only one was licensed ever before 1998. In 1998, the state introduced a new small distillation law that allows for licensing of distillationprocesses, less expensive and less difficult. The first licensed distillery in modern-day West Virginia was the West Virginia Distillery, in Granville, in 1999. West Virginia Distillery worked during 2017, after which it sold distillation equipment to the Pollock family in Charleston, WV, to develop a new distillery on the West Side of Charleston, which has not yet opened. As the state continues to modernize distillation laws, small distilleries can operate in tasting rooms where free samples can be given. They can sell their bottled spirits 7 days a week and offer promotional goods in their distillery. With the opportunity to run a retail store, the state has seen more and more small distilleries entering the business. It was among the distillations to obtain a license two in previously established wineries. Shawk Cheat uses its wine heritage to produce grappa and branandi in addition to corn whiskey. Isaiah Morgan Distillery, which opened the Kirkwood Winery in 2002, features whiskey as well as grappa. By the end of the decade 2000s, the growing national popularity of legal The products led to many small startups in the distillery over the next decade. The popular resurgence of small craft bourbon pushed back to other distillation slots. The state's most prominent distillery, Smooth Amber Spears, focuses on the production of premium bourbon. The majority interest in this distillation was purchased by the international spirits company Pernod Ricard in 2017. 2017.
