Configure juniper switch

Before you configure the EX switch for VLANs and other features by Walter J. Goralski, Cathy Gadecki, Michael Bushong, you have to rack the key, configure it and add other devices. Ship keys in juniper individual shipping crates. All EX switches come in cardboard boxes except EX 8200 devices. Ex 8200 models are much larger. To install these switches, you will need mechanical transport and lifting equipment and a team of three. Shelf switch Ex series switches can be loaded if you have small models on a rack or cabinet, even a desk or table. If you are mounting the switches on a rack or cabinet, screw the mounting brackets to the edges of the switch and file the switch on the rack or closet. If you plan to set the switch to a table or table, plug the rubber feet into the holes under the switch to prevent the chassis from sliding on the table and to help with airflow around the device. You can only wear the large EX 8200 on a rack or cabinet. Install the mounting brackets and use a mechanical elevator to move the switch to the appropriate position. Smaller EX series switches do not have/off switches on them. When you plug them in, they start to boot. If you need to turn off the switch, you need to stop the software and unplug it. The larger EX 8200 switch has an on/off switch. Configure the juniper EX switch Initially, an easy way to configure the key is to use the J-web GUI interface. After the switches are up, press the Menu button next to the LCD panel in front of the box and go to the Maintenance Menu. Press Enter, and then press the Menu button again until you see Enter EZ Setup. At this point, use an Ethernet cable to connect the computer to port 0 (called ge-0/0/0, the first Gigabit Ethernet interface) on the front panel of the switch: Go from the laptop scanner to 192.168.1.1. Log on as a user root without a password. On the Basic Settings page, set the key (host name), root password, and date and time. On the Management Options page, use the default VLAN (called the default) or create a new VLAN. On the Manage Access page, you can enable Telnet, SSH, and SNMP services in migration. Click Finish to enable the initial configuration on the key. Plug devices into the Juniper EX switch Ports are in front of the switch to plug network devices into the switch. For models with copper ports, all ports are 10/100/1000BASE-T ports, so you use the appropriate Ethernet cables to connect laptops, VoIP phones, wireless access points (WAPs), security cameras, and other network devices to the switch. If you used the default VLAN when you first configured the switch, all devices that you connect to the switch are placed in this VLAN and can start transmitting traffic on the network Key. If you have a different VLAN configured, you must configure the key to add the appropriate ports to this VLAN. Vlan.
