Ga bu ffxiv

11-03-2016 9:24 #1 I finally made the 3.4 story today and am quite confused. So.. Is Ga Bu dead? At the time of the movie sequence, I didn't notice anything of. I actually expected Maelstrom to kill him (because apart from us, no one really knows yet that hardened people can be brought back for real), but everyone said nice things, they passed away, and later in the headquarters of Mor Dhona, both Alphinaud and Alisiae talk about how we're going to visit Ga Bu soon, how it's only a matter of time before he recovers fully, etc. if you talk to them between missions. But... so someone told me As soon as Ga Bu is off-screen you can hear a shot from a gun and Alphinaud hears it and visibly reacts to it with a shocked expression, they killed Ga Bu right then and there. So I tried to look at the movie sequence, but as always, SE did a good job and did not include it in the rewatch book in the inn.. So I had to watch it in English on YouTube and where I actually heard a shot + saw Alphi expression But in that case, dialouge later does not make sense?! Sure, hiding it from his sister makes sense, but since Wol. already heard the shot, why would he hide it from them when they already know... I'm so confused right now .;. 11-03-2016 09:29 #2 Is Ga Bu the rotten thing you help? I don't think he's dead... I look at the movie sequences in Japanese though. 11-03-2016 09:33 #3 Originally Posted by Lokier Is Ga Bu that rotten things you help? A shot would have been louder and piercing and Alisiae who was right next to Alphinaud would have heard it. I think the noise was just Alisiae's cloths when she got up from the ground. The last scene she's upset and sitting. And so after the noise she stands and has a serious look and mentions how they will make those who caused everything to pay. Alphinaud is just a little surprised that his sister has such a strict look and manner after she was extremely sad. 11-03-2016 10:15 #5 No Ga Bu is alive. The maelstrom has taken care of him, and he has been taken to Limsa to raise a child in a military camp is a bad idea. According to the head of the camp in their view, apart from Ga Bu as a child, he also took a great risk that would have saved Maelstrom's life. If you want to talk to the guy who runs Camp Overlook, and he wants to mention it. I seriously doubt that they would kill the child and risk antagonizing Scions. Hell one of their officers is working on the 789th. I'll also be honest, but I don't remember any movie sequence when I leave Camp Overlook. I think you can talk Ga Bu before you ride off when you leave camp. 11-03-2016 10:41 #6 Especially it's about this scene and 2:11:37 sound + expression. A shot would have been louder and piercing actually what worries me, that the sound is quite loud and piercing, compared to how clothes would normally sound.. xD I'm going to believe you though, since I also want to believe it (and originally thought that way too). Edit: Nevermind, listened to it again in a clearer version, and it's actually just the typical to make a step sound that FFXIV uses, so you were right, and it was just Alisiae standing. Ahh, thank you all! Last edited by Atoli; 11-03-2016 at 11:18 am. Skip to content PageDiscussionEditHistory in: Primals in Final Fantasy XIV Edit Share (Avg. Alternative names: Lord of Crag's The will of the indomitable earth manifested, beloved by the cobalt clans. Compassionate and gentle, Titan is like the father of his tunnel-dwelling worshippers. But woe betid the fool enough to provoke this colossus — for when his anger is aroused, the earth itself trembles and throws under the unstoppable fury of his mountainous dent. Official site description Titan is the primal of the Cobalt animal tribes in Final Fantasy XIV, also known as lord of crags (Avg., Ganshin?). He is met as manager a number of times in A Realm Reborn. Although Titan with Leviathan was originally scheduled to appear in version 1.0+, due to real circumstances, they did not debut until the game was restarted as A Realm Reborn. History[edit] Spoiler warning: Plot and/or final details follow. (Skip section) Titan. Titan wakes up shortly after the adventurer investigates the events at Haukke Manor. Meeting admiral Merlwyb Bloefhiswyn at Maelstrom headquarters, she admits to both the adventurer and Y'shtola that she broke the agreement with Kobolds as part of efforts to rebuild after the accident, which has led to the summons of the primal. After searching from the Company of Heroes that killed Lord of Crag's when he was first summoned years ago, the veteran members set up a long list of smaller tasks — culminating in a banquet for Master Gegeruju — to test the adventurer's decision to defeat primal. After learning all the crucial information needed, Y'shtola rigs an Aetheryte set up by Kobolds in Upper La Noscea to access the Navel where the god of cobalt awaits. By entering the great underground chamber, the Lord chastises the Crag adventurer for ignoring the prayers of his children, before noticing that Ifrit has already been killed. Titan condemns the sons of man and engages the adventurer before he is banished back to the singles. As they turn to leave, Y'shtola notices that several Garlean officers are spying on the fight. Titan returns at Howling Eye, where Garuda forces captured Kolbolds and Amalj'aa to summon him and Ifrit under torture, allowing Gaius van Baelsar to make the Ultima weapon absorb the three primates one by one. After the destruction of the Ultima weapon, Kobold's Titan summons once again The adventurer uses Aetheryte set up in U'ghamoro Mines to banish primal again. When the adventurer discovers a mysterious ritual focus, Kkobolds continues his attempts to summon Titan, as they are encouraged by the Ascians to conjure Titan with greater amounts of aether in their despair. Titan is summoned again when the second Order Patriarch Za Da began sacrificing his own people to summon his god, but primal is summoned by the despair-filled feelings of a Cobalt named Ga Bu who could not save his parents from being slaughtered. [1] Titan acts on Ga Bus feelings of rage and attacks both humans and Cobalt before he was defeated by the adventurer again. Gameplay[edit] Boss[edit] Titan is fought as boss three times at Navel: first midway through the main scenario, then in a Hard version in a sidequest, and finally an optional Extreme battle. While the last two versions are fought at level 50 with a full party of eight, the first story is the match at level 34 with only four players. The navel (Hard) is required to restore a relic weapon, and the later most important scenario missions from Before the Fall require it — along with The Bowl of Embers (Hard) and The Howling Eye (Hard) — that were previously completed. Completing the Navel (Extreme) is optional, giving the achievement earth to earth. Titan also acts as a mechanic in the fight against the Ultima weapon, which uses him along with Ifrit and Garuda to carry out combination attacks. In both fights, he is the second primal to be ejected from the weapon. Notice[edit] Titan-Egi. The Summoner job can summon Titan-Egi as a melee animal. It is locked up in the Level 35 job quest Austerities of Earth, having defeated Egi. It replaces Topaz Carbuncle. Eat the adventurer's style by holding it firmly in place before taking a big bite. Place it under the weight! Etymology[edit] Titans were members of second order of divine beings in Greek mythology. They were descendants of the original deities born from the chaos, and they preceded the gods of Olympus, who continued to overthrow them. † Final Fantasy XIV, Soul Surrender Community content is available under CC-BY-SA unless otherwise stated. I understand why now Ga Bu was still part of the story after seeing the new Shadowbringer Trailer. If we decide to believe Solus that Hydaelyn and Zodiark are Primals and that we could have been tempered by Hydaelyn maybe Lil' Ga Bu will play a small role in making us further understand tempering:o?! What do you think? Edit: Also, why should they have brought him back in 4.5 (?) just before Alissae was drawn to the first? I'm expecting more of our little guy during 5.0:3! Page 2 56 comments
