Outdoor writer Ed Godfrey, and his son, Kid, show off a big bass caught on Lake Rock Creek table in Missouri. [Photo from Linda Lane, Oklahoman] My 13-year-old son, Kid, has a lot in common with Jimmy Houston when it comes to hunting. Not much the catching part, but the kissing part. It is a well fish retarded and the actual fishing part is a challenge for Kid, who was born with Down syndrome. On the day Kid was born, my wife and I were shocked to receive the news of Down's syndrome, I felt like I fell off a mountain and I was so happy the day I found out Linda was having a son we already had two daughters and the third could have been great, but deep down I really wanted a boy. I wasn't just my side of the family having suffered from the Godfrey girls in the long run. Everyone wanted a boy to keep Godfrey's name. After that. Born people, they told me that I would be blessed by having a son with Down syndrome. At the time, I wasn't sure to believe them, but they were right. It's a challenge to be Kid's father sometimes, but over the years I've learned to focus more on the things Kid can do, not what he can't do. What he can do is bring joy to everyone who meets him. Kid liked to be outdoors, but fishing was mostly a spectator sport for him when we went. During our recent stay at Big Cedar Lodge near Branson, Missouri, PR people hooked us up with a hunting guide to Tony Weldele, owner of Rainbow Stalkers Service Guide (417-294-7335). We ventured on a hot September morning on Lake Table Rock for a few hours to see if we could get kid to catch his first fish. The day before, Wildell was part of a large group that directed the children from the Make A Day's Fishing Wish program at Spice Rock Lake. Weldell, who lives on Spice Rock Lake, grew up in St. Louis and was a baseball fan of the Cardinals, so we've been hitting him right away, since I've been a Cardinals fan since 1967. It's aimed at The St. Louis Cardinals baseball players, Dallas Cowboys players, professional golfers and many other celebrities who enjoy the comforts of big rice. I told him that none of these fishing trips would be memorable such living with Kid is like living with leprechaun. Fishing with him is a similar adventure. He was jumping into Weldell's seat at every opportunity, wanting to press the buttons on the boat console and trying to steal his cell phone. (The story continued below...) Kid tries to take everyone's mobile phone. He could sail in one better than his old man and my wife kept an eye out of the hawks on him to make sure he didn't take the keys from the boat and hide them, another trick he likes to pull. Kid thinks all these pranks are great fun and it's for him. (Kid) usually has us too, except for the time he ended up with a cell phone at the bottom of a lake. Weldele baited some Canadian night crawlers on some spinning rollers in the hope of landing some Missouri fish. We got bites right away and lost them immediately. We even had three fish breaking the line, prompting Weldele to ask if we had brought any bananas on the boat. There is an old myth about bananas being bad luck on fishing boats. A quick check on the internet provides several explanations for this tall story. Among them: when ships sink in earlier times, the precious little other than the bananas they were carrying would be found floating on the surface, leaving some to conclude that the fruit itself had led to these marine accidents. • Spiders, snakes and other deadly creatures will reach to ride with bananas in holding ships and eventually fested other parts of the ship. • Because fast ships were used to get bananas to their destinations before Can spoil, those who try to fish them never caught anything while trolling. We hadn't brought any bananas on board, but didn't bring many strawberry banana yogurt to kid. Such snacks are vital in any kind of adventure with Kid. We have concluded that our bad luck in hunting must be the result of the yogurt he has almost chosen. Just like at home, Kid is the first suspect when anything is missing or going wrong. Luckily, kid had all the strawberry banana yogurt eaten in the first 30 minutes of the trip. Then the fish started biting , Weldell suddenly landed with Bass, handed Kid the penis, and (Reel) handed me apple juice, and Weldell told me to grab the net, but he wasn't impressed with my netting skills. In my defense, it's not easy to try net a fish with one hand while trying not to leak a can of apple juice into the other. Kidd needed help with the fish but he got his glass of fish in the boat and wildle unhooked a big bass for him, and then almost planted a kiss on her lips that would make Jimmy Houston proud. Kidd then ordered his mother and dad to start fishing, like we can do it on driving. We caught and released a few more Missouri bass that morning before it was called the day. Honestly, I think Kid enjoyed riding the boat more than fishing. We're going to have to help drive. Back at The Hook Marina, he almost boasted of catching fish more than anyone else. He's a liar I think he's a really fisherman related to Kid Godfrey, 13, from Edmund, clutching a bass on Lake Rock Creek in Missouri with the help of tony weldele's fishing guide from Rainbow Stalkers Service Guide. I've been a mentor here for 26 years and this is the first tape I've ever seen caught, said Weldele, who runs rainbow stalkers service guide from Branson. I was doing a guided tour of a family staying at Big Cedar Lodge. We were dropping live night ruins near the dam. When I collided at 32 feet of water, it took off like a madman. I said to the kid maybe you're hooked giant catfish! The young man fought the fish for 10 to 15 minutes. After about 10 minutes, I looked good at the fish and knew it was a giant bar. He was as surprised as the family he was leading. They were very shocked when Weldell came to remember. This was the first real catch for this kid. He hunted the fish of a lifetime and the family donated the pack to Wildell, who took him home, cleaned it and cut the strong red meat along the sides. It's real, steady white meat. He ate it for dinner! Shane Bush, a fisheries biologist at Shepherd's Near By Hatchery Hills, and the Missouri Department of Conservation of the Planned Bass Store in Table Rock Lake, said even though they put them in Lake Bull Shawal downstream from Rock More, the Kayaker Monster Bass Chart land in Lake Schulz said he was 99 percent sure the big strip came from Lake Beaver in Arkansas, the source of Lake Brook Rock. The tape has been stored for many years. It is possible that he came over the dam in Beaver through the high water. They don't breed in our lakes, so the only way to get them is to keep them stored. It's rare but unheard of to see one in the rock table. But I can count on the hand on the number of times I've seen or heard from the tape being captured at Lake Table Rock in all my years here. Bass scheme primarily ate Shad Gizzard, and there's a lot of shading in the rock table to fatten up the ribbon, Bush said. He said studies have shown that the stripes do not affect large and small bass populations. However, the Conservation Department has no plans to store Lake Brook Rock with a bass scheme. More: Dozens of bald eagles have appeared in the spotted creek stored in Dogwood CanyonThere no doubt can get huge. The Missouri bass record was captured by Lawrence Dillman of Rockaway Beach in 2015 at Lake Paul Schulz and weighed 65 lbs 2 oz. Arkansas' record was 64 pounds. Fishing in 2000 in Lake Beaver Tail Water, under the dam. This is the same part of the white river that eventually flows into Lake Table Rock. Lake.
