You can apply as early as November but the deadline is February (current date here) via the folio website. You will not schedule an actual exam until the test schedule is opened, usually about 2 months before the test date. The result takes about 8-10 weeks. In 2016, the score was released on November 30 (so 10 weeks). Eligibility (see information document):Graduation from a legal medical schoolThere is a full medical license Completing the residency program (or seniors on track to complete the test before taking the test)Complete 3 Clinical Skills Assessments (CSE)Cost : $700 registration fee when you sign up to tell them that you are ready for the $1685 test fee when you schedule an exam with Pearson VUE. You have 7 years after completing the ACGME residency program to pass ABPN to become a certified board. So you have a lot of trying if things go south (the next try only costs the exam fee $1685). Exam & ContentYou have 50 minutes of rest between sections. Any time off you take more than 50 minutes is allowed, but then they eat at the time of trial your reality, is 8.5 section divided between part A + B or part C question: 110 questions in Part A (Basic concepts in psychology)110 questions in Part B (Neuroclinics and Neuroclinics)230 questions in Part C (Clinical Theology). So 8 parts of 50-65 questions each for a total of 450 questions over 510 minutes. About 20% are neurosc scientist/neurosc scientist. Tack on a referral 5 minutes and 5 minutes after the survey test and 50 minutes of time off, and the whole day can take up to 9.5 hours. 4 sections based on textures and 4 sections are purely independent questions (from formatting and grading materials).Independent questions are the best answer multiple choice questions that do not involve any other questions. Part A and section B questions are all independent questions. For textured questions, there are usually 2-10 multiple choice questions related to a common case that can be presented in a video clip, which can vary in length from one to four minutes, an audio clip or in a text motif. ABPN provides a sample video motif to stimulate your appetite. Historically, each section was graded separately and needed to be adopted. Now the test is graded in a combination; it can no longer fail a single part and thus fail the exam. In 2016, an accurate 71% overall is the passing threshold. And everything is now DSM-V (from policy documentation): Starting in 2017, all the specifications and content of all exams offered by ABPN computers will be based solely on DSM-5. There is no DSM-IV-TM classification and diagnostic criteria will apply. BooksQuestion BanksBoard VitalsThe most common bank question for ABPN is the Vitals Board of Directors (which also questions banks for other specialties as well). This resource is definitely error-free and some users feel that it contains too much esoterica, but it is still widely used. That's $139 for a month. Using the BW10 code at checkout was also you 10% off (buy after clicking on the link that gives me a referral: if you don't want me to get anything, then just use the coupon code without clicking on the link). Overall, the questions represented pretty good board style, and the product was good in size (1639 questions). BV was fully updated for DSM-V in 2017. A lot of neurological questions are actually psychiatrists, so the neural coverage is less than you guessed since you first logged in. As a web-based exclusive product, there is no off-line access. You also need to press the explanation display button to see the explanation for a question, which gets tired after a while. There is also a new 250-option questionthe package (actually 257) based on video motifs available as add-ons (extra $139/month), expensive but basically the only source of la carte for certain this question is current. TrueLearnA new player TrueLearn, which has products for both PRITE and ABPN (benwhite code saves 10%). Questions feel harder and have a more basic science/type of medical school feel than those found in other resources. The interface is a little more cluttered, but the software is overall solid: you can pass the answer choices and also have a summary statement of the bottom line, which is very useful. Finally, TrueLearn is a reasonable second source of online questions behind Board Vitals but is generally not yet fully productive. Overall, a few source questions may be enough, so after Kenny & Spiegel and Board Vitals +/- look more nervous depending on your background, most contestants can be taken questions wisely. Beat the Boardsts a $1,097 online lecture course with a question -1,000 and -50 motifs. We contacted them to provide access to this review and were completely ignored. This is really expensive and ultimately not necessary to overcome. Book round-out: Kaufman's Clinical Neurology for Psychiatrists may be too long to read cover to cover during a limited post-work board review, but it also contains 2000 questions (extras are online) to help round out your neurology review. Psychiatric Board Review: Pearls of Wisdom is a change of pace written in a Q&A format A concise that is useful as an ancythomic, but it is now a bit out of date and is urely well suited as other review books. It contains a lot of high yield events held quickly read but cries out for a DSM-V update. Unlike for Step 1, First Aid to the Psychiatric Council is not the strongest source for psychiatric consideration and can be ignored. It purportedly does a passable job for neurosc on neuroscology but is still a safe pass unless you just have another book. Thanks to my awesome wife (the precious psychiatrist) for the help writing this post.
