It can be found in National Geographic Kids Magazine and Almanac/Infopedia and is occasionally featured in Daily Explorer. The other way the code is distributed is for Jam-A-Grams AJHQ to send on special occasions, such as holidays. Each code can only be used once, and both non-members and members can use the code. These codes can also be found by buying something from AJ Outfitters, most codes that enter the code are case insensitive and can be entered with eitherOr lowercase letters. There are three ways for players to enter a code. The first way is to go to animal jam's home screen and say I have a code to enter! To enable a text box where players can enter a code by selecting a box next to . However, players cannot log in because the box will only appear if the player's login is displayed. The second way is to enter the code on the Redeem code page in Animal Jam, and the player will go to the page to see if the code applies to the player's account. If the player logs off, they will need to sign in again. The third way is to click the Code Entry button in the My Settings menu during the game. When the Jazwares Adopt-A-Pet code is used, a toy icon collected appears in the Pet Adoption Checklist. If the player enters too much code, a security capture pop-up appears to verify that the user is not a robot. Previously, there was a bug where players could enter a code when their membership expired and play as a non-member using a member's animal. However, this bug has been patched. If the code expires and becomes available again, users who enter the code before it expires will be available again. Animal Jam CEO Clark Stacy has announced the code PENGUINS on his Twitter account for the closure of game club Penguin Island. He said they were a gift for the club penguin community that made Jamar feel welcome. When the code was released, pet penguins were made available to all jammers.
