The building was built after Million Dollar Fire in 1897. The Fire Fire in a nearby hotel and destroyed the whole block on our side of the street. The flames spread so quickly and were so intense that the Chattanooga Fire Department was called in to help. They put their pumps on a train that left for Knoxville approaching speeds of 90+ miles per hour. When the building was rebuilt, it was home to McNulty Grocery and Dry Goods Co. In 1901 M.M Newcomer's Department Store made the transition from across the street into the building at 402 South Gay Street. It was one of Knoxville's larger stores. As an interesting aside to the history of the actual building, the original Mast Store in Valle Crucis had a long relationship with Knoxville, making the store on Gay Street even more interesting. In the course of reviewing invoices for goods purchased on the shelves from 1902 to 1920, several invoices had Knoxville addresses. One of the addresses is just down the street at what is now downtown grill and brewery. In the early 1900s it was Woodruffs, a wholesale and retail house for all kinds of goods. There are also a number of McClung Wholesale invoices. McClung warehouses are just a short drive from the shop and are close to the railway yard. Farm tools, barbed wire, and other items were stocked from this business. In 1932, Knox dry replaced The Store M.M. New Arrivals. Over the years it provided all kinds of goods and services, including a beauty salon on the second floor. Knox Dry Goods modernized its name in 1954 and became known as The Knox. It was a mainstay of downtown until 1977, when the Boston Store moved into the building. By the late 1970s, many retailers had left the center of the suburbs. The store was vacant until the White Grocer moved in in 1982 and operated until 1988. Then the building was used for storage, including sewing machines and all other items. Mast Store opened in August 2006. Described as an alternately quiet and noisy river town, Knoxville for a time was actually part of the Wild West. The notorious Kid Curry, a member of Butch Cassidy's Wild Bunch, was arrested and held in Knoxville prison. He later fled and galloped out of town on a horse he stole from the sheriff. Production and distribution became an important part of the local economy for Knoxville - and the Tennessee River and rail lines made much of the city's growth possible. Gay Street was the centre of commercial development and was lined with shops, warehouses, stables and more. And then came The Million Dollar Fire of 1897. It was 4 a.m in the morning when the flames were seen leaping through the roof of the Hotel Knoxville located right where the Mast Store is now. The fire department moved out and got as many boarders out as possible. Knowing that the fire could get out of hand, the fire service in Chattanooga was approached and made the journey to Knoxville aboard a train record time (at speeds topping 90 miles per hour). A building had to be dynamited to control the fire. At the end of the day, only five lives were lost, the Chattanooga fire department returned home to cheers, and two blocks of Gay Street lay in smouldering ruins. The losses were valued at $1 million and the cause has not yet been determined. Out of the ashes came the building you see today, which was built in 1898. It's clear to see.
